Spring Extravaganza

Thanks to our retail and "online" customers we are one of the largest resources for goose down comforters, pillows and featherbeds. Consumers that compare our quality and prices to those of department stores, discounters, catalogs and other web sites find that we are indeed unbeatable - and we guarantee that! Know the facts of down before you buy.

FACT: Down comes from the chest of the bird to keep it insulated from the weather. Feathers (those things with quills) come from the back of the bird to keep it dry. Down can cost as much as $10.00 an ounce, feathers 10¢ an ounce. Over 90% of down manufacturers find it to their advantage to add over 30% feathers to their down. It's like buying three pounds of ground sirloin and getting two pounds of meat and one pound of fat. You have paid for meat and got fat, it's the same with their down, they both do it because it's legal. We do not contaminate our down by adding feathers to it.

KNOW THE FACTS BEFORE YOU BUY IT

FACT: Fill power, this is the amount the cubic inches filled by one ounce of down. Higher fill power means a higher quality down. You will find that as the quality of the down increases, so does the comfort & life of the item.

FACT: We use only high thread count, baffle box construction, 100% cotton covers on our down comforters & pillows. Down insulates by trapping air and holding in your body temperature, keeping you comfortable through the night. Low quality comforters are usually heavier because it takes more of an inferior down to fill a comforter. Inferior down becomes clumpy and it can't breath, resulting in your becoming over heated and uncomfortable. Our high quality down gives you the warmth and comfort without the weight.

FACT: In all likelihood you will have your comforter longer than the car you are now driving.

"We go the distance for you."

Don't Walk

A Walk/Don't Walk Sign Means Don't EVER Walk In East Hampton

By Dan Rattiner

About a month ago, the City of New York announced something that I have long suspected. Of the 2,476 WALK/DON'T WALK buttons in the City, only two work.

"We gave up on these a long time ago," a representative of the City Transportation Department said. "The original idea was that you press the button to walk and at the next light change, the traffic lights are forced to stay red in both directions while the green WALK indicator goes on for thirty seconds. Pedestrians can walk.

"But many of the Avenues in the city, all moving one way, have traffic lights that change from green to red in sequence. If someone presses the walk button on 53rd Street and Madison, everything goes out of order from that point up."

He was asked why the City didn't then remove the WALK/DON'T WALK buttons. "It was too expensive to remove them. We just disabled them. Except for two. I don't know why." He noted the locations of them. One is in Queens, the other in the Bronx.

What is most interesting about this, as far as East Hampton is concerned, is that last summer, the New York State Department of Transportation took out the old, worn, WALK/DON'T WALK buttons in the center of town at Main Street and Newtown Lane, and replaced them with new buttons. They also installed, above the new WALK/DON'T WALK button, something completely unique — big glowing countdown numbers like those on a rocketship that is about to take off for the moon.

He was asked why the City didn't then remove the WALK/DON'T WALK buttons. It was too expensive.

You look at the new state of the art — and now regulation — pedestrian instruction sign, and you see that it is a striding green man, telling you to walk, and you expect that shortly it will turn into a palm-up red hand, telling you to stop. Instead, beginning 30 seconds before the green man turns to a red hand, a big glowing orange number 30 replaces everything, and commences a countdown, one number a second. It goes 29, 28, 27, 26, 25 and so forth, and all during this time you can walk across the street, and then it goes 5, 4, 3, 2, 1, and then it's the RED HAND.

During the countdown, you are supposed to know to skitter to the other side of the street. After that, you will get flattened by the traffic. It's like 5, 4, 3, 2, 1, POW! Better be somewhere else.

As to whether pressing the button made things better or faster for pedestrians, I could not tell just from a casual observation. But clearly there is SOMETHING going on.

Frankly, for a bucolic, white-steepled, wooden windmilled, old New England Village with a Steven Spielberg observed the tenth anniversary of the Survivors of the Shoah Visual History Foundation by releasing Schindler's List on DVD with important documentary footage from the Shoah Foundation. The East Hampton filmmaker, who has not benefited financially from the movie, sees the Shoah Foundation's fifty-two thousand accounts from fifty-six countries in thirty-two languages from Holocaust survivors as a means to educate the world. Hauntingly beautiful music was recorded by Mr. Spielberg's East Hampton neighbor, Itzhak Perlman, with photos by David James in a special collector's gift set.

As A Bank Joins The Big Leagues, The Name Of It Holds

By Dan Rattiner

A friend of mine from the business world in Manhattan was out for the weekend last week. Over lunch he had this to say:

"I see one of the big national banking chains has a great many branches out here."

I asked to what he was referring.

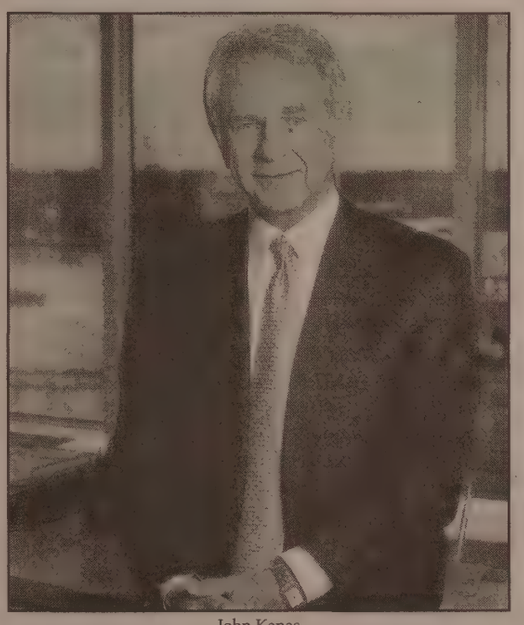

"North Fork," he said. He told me North Fork had just taken over Greenpoint, an old banking firm based in New York City. He thought he knew a lot about North Fork. He didn't.

North Fork Bank was founded in Southold Township about a hundred years ago to serve the needs of the East End farming community. Mostly, at that time, it was about potatoes. And the potatoes were mostly about local families who owned the farms and farmed them for generation after generation. Among the distinguished families here were – and are — those with such names as Sidor, White Corwith, Foster, Zuhoski, Ruland and Rutkoski.

In the 1950s about 40,000 acres of the East End were potato farms. It was the dominant crop here, with duck farming a distant second.

In 1962, a young local boy named John Kanas was working summers in a deli in East Moriches. He was going into his senior year at Eastport High School and wanted to save money for college. He had his sights set on Southampton, intending to commute to the college from his home in East Moriches, where his grandfather owned a duck farm. But if John wanted to go to college he would have to pay his own way.

After John's freshman year at college he went back to the deli as the summer manager. Halfway into that summer the owner told John that he needed a younger man to run it with the long days and extra hours, or he was going to close the deli and John would have to find other work.

But John Kanas liked working in the deli and, according to the owner, it made money – not a lot – but enough to get by. Kanas asked the owner to stay open for another two weeks. He would like to try to buy the business from him. He was 19 years old when he and his cousin, Mike Capozzola, bought the deli. Mike worked there during the week and John worked there at night and on weekends.

John Kanas went to the Security National Bank where he secured a loan for over $15,000 to buy the deli with a $3,000 down payment, putting up the deli as security. John was now committed to paying interest every month to the bank.

In 1968, John Kanas was in the first full graduating class from Southampton College. With a degree in teaching, he taught in the Patchogue-Medford Schools and it was in that school system he met his wife, Elaine. Earning $15,000 a year motivated him to study for the bar, and he did well on his law boards. He and his wife planned to move after his acceptance from the University of Chicago Law School, but a conversation with an acquaintance, a man named Chapman from East Moriches, changed his life.

Chapman, a landowner, had written to the region's banks to ask that someone open a branch in East Moriches. The sole response came from North Fork Bank. Chapman and Kanas met with Ed Litchhult, the bank's president, at the bank's first branch office on Love

Lane in Mattituck. Litchhult asked Kanas to open a second branch in East Moriches, offering to pay for his continuing education which would get him an MBA. The pay for the bank job, in addition to the above, would be $7,500.

In the spring of 1971 John Kanas went to work for the North Fork Bank, so they could train him for a year while the branch was built in East Moriches. People didn't trust bank branches very much at the time. They'd rather put their money into formidable, bank-looking brick buildings with big safes in them. The way around this was to find someone trusted in the local community to lend his name to the bank and be the manager. And so that is why they chose the young deli owner. The branch opened in the summer of 1972 with John Kanas as the Assistant to the President. The first two years' budget numbers were met within the first six weeks. Branches in Speonk, Shirley, Mastic Beach and Quogue followed within two and a half years, all successful.

At 26, Kanas was earning $18,000 a year. Citibank tried to hire him away with an offer of $35,000 but once again, fate took over. North Fork President Ed Litchult had become seriously ill. Because Kanas was his assistant, many decisions fell to him. One of them was to supervise a stockholders' meeting, although he had never been to one. Soon after that, Litchult announced he would retire, and they now had to choose a new president. Another stockholders' meeting was held, John Kanas presiding, at which candidates were considered. But afterwards, when the SEC ruled the meeting could not nominate a new president unless the old president was in chargeof the meeting, the Board named Kanas interim president, and after that, since it seemed to be working, president. John Kanas was just 29.

Kanas says now he wakes up every morning and can't wait to go to work. His adventure with the bank has only just begun, he says. His goal is to make North Fork a rival of Chase, Citicorp and J.P. Morgan Chase & Co., and, with a combination of pluck, knowledge and luck, he is well on his way. No wonder a Wall Street-type today might think North Fork came out to the Hamptons, rather than the other way around.

One way to measure a bank's success is by the amounts that its depositors bring to it. Another is by the profits that it presents to its stockholders. By each of these measures, the story of the North Fork Bank and John Kanas is a remarkable one. When Kanas come to the bank, there were 28 employees, just $20 million on deposit in three branches and profits were $180,000. Today, North Fork employs 10,000 people and has 350 branches with $35 billion on deposit and profits of $400 million. It is the fifteenth largest bank in the nation with market capitalization of $14 billion. That North Fork has grown to such a size is largely due to the extraordinary banking culture that Kanas has brought to the firm. Since 1990 – when it was just a medium-sized regional bank – the consensus among twenty banking analysts has been that North Fork was the best-run bank in the entire country. It was a pleasure to bank with and a pleasure to work for. Apparently, it has no equal. And it is this culture – to do or die for North Fork – that has helped fend off recent takeover attempts, when North Fork was on its way to the big leagues and was a good takeover target.

Of course, it has not all been a straight line to success. About five years ago, Kanas persuaded the board of North Fork – still headquartered in the Town of Southold – to take over the faltering Dime Savings Bank in New York. The battle raged for several months and in the end, it failed. But Kanas sucked it up and they moved on.

I mentioned luck. One piece of it involves a bit of marketing that has benefited North Fork in a very unexpected way. I think, for a long time, as North Fork grew from a small East End bank to a medium sized East End bank, the name North Fork worked because it was a name familiar to this place.

When the bank grew firther, it occurred to me that the name might not hold up. Its name might need to be changed to a more generic one. But then, amazingly, the country got into exercise, the environment and climbing, big time. My young wall Street friend was, this past weekend, wearing a jacket from North Face. North Fork had not had to go to the mountain. Just in time, the mountain came to North Fork.

I see Kanas around town every once in awhile. I do much of my banking, though not

Two years After The Crime, Daniel Pelosi Is Charged With Murder

By Dan Rattiner

The lead suspect in the murder of Wall Street financier Ted Ammon of East Hampton, Daniel Pelosi, was charged with murder in the second degree in connection with that case on Tuesday morning. Second degree murder is a non-premeditated killing resulting from an assault in which death of the victim was a distinct possibility.

Pelosi, a blue collar worker who had been hired by the Ammons to do electrical work around the house, was handcuffed when brought into court, read the charge against him, and then was taken away. He did not speak at this arraignment. The Judge, denying a request on behalf of Pelosi for release on $1 million bail, ordered him held. He noted the viciousness of the crime. Conviction of second degree murder can carry a sentence of 25 years to life.

The story of this murder, and the involvement of Daniel Pelosi, is a bizarre and unusual one. Mr. and Mrs. Ammon, who were experiencing difficulty in their marriage, had hired an electrician to install a burglar alarm at their East Hampton house, which is located on Middle Lane, the road that runs parallel to and between Further Lane and Hither Lane.

Soon thereafter, Generosa Ammon filed for divorce against her husband, and moved into a separate penthouse apartment in Manhattan on the Upper East Side, not far from where Mr. Ammon had another apartment. There she was frequently seen in the company of the electrician, Daniel Pelosi of Manorville. Soon she was living with him openly.

The murder occurred just weeks before a divorce agreement between the Ammons was finalized, presumably dividing up the estimated $60 million Ammon estate. Instead, during that October night, someone entered the Ammon mansion in East Hampton where Ted Ammon was alone and asleep, stunned him with a Taser gun, and then bludgeoned him in the head with more than sixty blows from a blunt object. Ammon was found naked, his body slumped over along the side of the bed, dead, by an employee. He was 52 and had been dead at least 24 hours. The burglar alarm had been turned off.

Generosa, his widow, got everything.

Three months later, after the funeral, Daniel Pelosi arranged a quickie divorce from his wife in Manorville, then married Generosa Ammon in a quiet ceremony in Queens. Afterwards, with Generosa's and Ted's two adopted children, then eleven years old, they went to live in the Ammon mansion in London, away from all the media attention, as Daniel Pelosi put it.

In a short time, however, Generosa was diagnosed with terminal cancer and Pelosi had to return to East Hampton to face drunken driving charges from the year before. Soon thereafter, Generosa returned to spend her final days in the mansion on Middle Lane, and was attended by nurses and physicians. During that time, she cut her new husband, Pelosi, out of her will. Then she passed on.

In recent months, Daniel Pelosi has been frequently interviewed on television about these events, and about what the future holds. He recently emerged from a month in the Riverhead Jail for breaking parole on a prior drunken driving charge. He's had numerous DWIs. Three weeks ago, while vacationing in Hawaii, he was arrested and charged with assaulting a man on a tour boat. He now claims to be broke.

It therefore did not come as a surprise to many when, on Wednesday, six days before this arraignment, an "exclusive" was aired on CBS News, which consisted of Daniel Pelosi telling a reporter that he had learned from his lawyers that he was being indicted. He would be turning himself in, in the courthouse in Riverhead the following morning. Networks sometimes pay for exclusives. But then again, sometimes they don't.

TERRORISM AS A TRIGGER FOR A WORLD WAR

By Dan Rattiner

I have sometimes wondered what would have happened on the afternoon of September 11, 2001, if Al Gore had been president. He had lost the election ten months before by a whisker. How would he have handled things?

Of course, we will never know. What we do know, however, is what Bush did. He declared war on terrorism and said he would not rest until every terrorist had been killed or jailed. He invaded Afghanistan to chase down those responsible for the attack on 9/11. And then he invaded Iraq over much opposition, both domestic and foreign. When told that terrorists were swarming into Iraq to fight the Americans, he said "Bring 'em on." Now things have spilled over into Malaysia, Africa, Russia and Spain. If we are up for stamping out terrorism, the terrorists seem committed to being up to stamping out us.

One cannot ever blame George Bush for attacks by terrorists. But one can disagree with his World War III approach. There have been occasions where the cudgels were thrown down. But somewhere between capitulation — as in Spain — and a fight to the death, which is what we are involved with here, there is a middle ground.

We will never know what Al Gore would have done, but we can see what other Presidents have done when confronted with terrorist acts. In 1979, when the Ayatollah took the 13 Americans hostage in Iran, Jimmy Carter did nothing. He withdrew and prayed. He allowed one rescue mission to be mounted, but it was halfhearted, not very well thought out and it failed. Eventually, Carter was voted out of office. In 1983, nearly 300 American soldiers were killed in Lebanon when terrorists blew up the barracks building in which they were housed. Ronald Reagan condemned terrorism, but he did pull the surviving soldiers out of exposed positions. In 1988, terrorists brought down Pan Am 103 over Scotland and 259 American civilians died. Reagan countered with a single air attack on Libya, which resulted in the death of the son of Colonel Muammar Gaddafi. In 1993, six American civilians were killed when terrorists blew up part of the foundation of the World Trade Center. George Bush Sr. hunted down those who did it and put them on trial. But he did not declare a world war on terrorists. Nor did Bill Clinton declare war on terrorists during his administration.

It is possible to argue that terrorist activities might just simmer down if the reaction to such activities were hard, fast, deadly strikes against the perpetrators, but without the sturm un drang. A rallying cry to fight to the death can do more harm than good if you are already dealing with zealots.

But when you think about the current situation, even if you allow for the horrific fact of the attack on the Twin Towers and the Pentagon, you come up with a very interesting question.

What do these people want?

In earlier times, there have been occasions when there were threats to this country that made it inevitable to declare war. But the motives of those attacking us were clear for all to see.

The Confederacy said that to preserve slavery, they would break this country in two. They fired on Fort Sumter to start hostilities. Lincoln responded.

The Japanese wanted to rule half of the world and made a surprise attack at Pearl Harbor. Roosevelt responded.

The Germans wanted to rule the other half of the world and declared war on America. Roosevelt responded.

Communists in North Korea wanted to drive democracy off the Korean peninsula. Truman responded.

As far as the Muslim extremists are concerned, if you ask them what they want, they would probably say they want strict Muslim Law to be the official law of the land in about half the world, which would extend from Morocco to Afghanistan and from Somalia to Chechnya and that would include Israel. Remember, these are the people that pulled down or blew up hundreds of ancient Buddhist statues in western Afghanistan. They hate the Buddhists as much as they hate the Jews or the Christians or the other Godless people of the west.

Are these people worth declaring a world war against, with our president demanding that all civilized nations rise to the challenge? Few world leaders seem to think that is a worthwhile idea. For one thing, the ulta-religious Muslims are considered a lunatic fringe group by the great majority of Muslims. For another, going to war against them validates their cause. As in Northern Ireland or along the Israeli-Palestinian border or the Pakistan-Indian border, such conflicts can continue for a century or more when it is a fight to the death approach. It turns into an eye for an eye. One death begets another, and a second death begets a third, and all it does is escalate into terrible bloodshed that can last for decades.

Even the Russians, who have been locked in a conflict with Chechen Muslim terrorists for twenty years, would not follow the Americans into Iraq. No consensus for world war exists.

Going to war against the Muslim world in the belief that you can convert them with the right to vote, freedom, democracy and access to Western gadgetry is one answer. But in the deserts of Arabia, where no democratic society yet exists, the horns sound, and where one extremist falls, a newly converted Muslim extremist rallies to the cause, willing to strap on a bomb and give his life to drive out the infidels.

The responses to clear threats to the integrity of the nation offered up by Abraham Lincoln and Franklin D. Roosevelt were powerful, dignified, eloquent and effective. They demanded unconditional surrender and they got it.

Responding with such demands to sporadic terrorist acts, which have been going on for centuries, as if they were cataclysmic, can create cataclysm. Look at the cause of World War I. A single gunshot kills Archduke Ferdinand. It's not true that the world was on the brink of war when that happened. It was at peace. But from that gunshot, because of the existence of signed treaties between certain nations, events tumbled out of control and in four years, five million people died.

It is fair to say that many of those opposed to war with Iraq felt that things could tumble out of control. But in the end, they reluctantly supported the President when he assured everyone there were weapons of mass destruction there.

Does George Bush have anything, other than rage to stop what is going on? Does John Kerry have anything, other than rage to stop what is going on?

Astronomers Discover Tenth Planet, Give It A Name

By Dan Rattiner

The big news in Astronomy last week was the announcement of the discovery of Sedna, which astronomers say is orbiting the sun far, far beyond Pluto, the ninth planet, and is therefore, in fact, the tenth planet. The object was named Sedna, after the Intuit goddess of the sea.

Other scientists say, however, that Sedna does not qualify as a planet. They point out that Sedna is composed primarily of ice and dirt and is, therefore, just a piece of junk orbiting in space.

"If we call Sedna a planet, where is it going to stop?" one said. "There are probably a thousand pieces of ice out there orbiting the sun in our solar system beyond Pluto. And what about all the asteroids in the asteroid belt between Mars and Jupiter?"

One scientist suggested that only round objects with names be considered planets. Sedna would qualify because it is round, while the asteroids would not. Another scientist said that for the past one hundred years, the world of astronomy has only accepted nine objects as planets — Mercury, Venus, Earth, Mars, Jupiter, Saturn, Uranus, Neptune and Pluto — and that is how it should always be. He suggested that Sedna and others, that are basically ice balls, be called "minor planets."

On the other hand, the Director of the Rose Center for Earth and Space in New York has announced that Pluto is largely an ice ball, too, and he has officially declared that there are only eight objects that can be called planets. He has removed Pluto from a display that had formerly shown the accepted nine planets.

Meanwhile, there have been other developments. In San Francisco, demonstrations have broken out demanding planethood for all round objects circling the sun. People are lining up at City Hall to name the hundreds of ice and dirt objects circling the sun out beyond Pluto.

"Our solar system should welcome any object that is in a circular orbit, or roughly circular orbit around the sun," one of the demonstrators said. "What if there are people living on these so far unnamed objects? These people and these planets should have the same rights as everybody. We should open up our hearts."

> He suggested that Sedna and others, that are basically ice balls, be called "minor planets."

The Mayor of the City of San Francisco has begun issuing documents to citizens who bring one or another of these objects to his attention. The documents declare these objects to be in a state of Planethood and declare them officially welcome in our solar system.

In the east, the Legislature of the State of Massachusetts has passed a bill that would allow any object that circles the sun to be called a "planet" and receive "all the rights and privileges thereto." The governor has not yet said whether he will sign it when it reaches his desk.

The Attorney General of the United States has issued a stop and desist order to the Mayor of San Francisco, and has said that the names given these new so-called planet are invalid. But the planethood ceremonies continue.

The matter has even reached the White House. In a speech last night to the United States Council of Churches, the President announced that he would support a Constitutional Amendment that would limit the number of planets to nine.

"Nine is the number of planets," he said. "We know this to be a sacred fact. This is America."

He did say, however, that the States were free to bestow the rank of "minor planethood" on any orbiting object that they saw fit.

"I think any objects that circle the sun should have the same civil rights as any other objects that circle the sun," he said. "But that should be decided on a state by state basis. Just don't call them planets."

"Where will it all end?" one astronomer asked?

town green, this is a pretty stressful thing. But it does work, although you still have to sometimes deal with all the cars coming around the corner going RIGHT ON RED. Though that's another story.

As for all the other WALK/DON'T WALK buttons, I decided it was important, as an editor, to find out if they really work here in East Hampton, and so I sent a reporter, me, downtown to learn the truth and write this story for Dan's Papers. I took a stopwatch.

My first stop was the traffic light by the East Hampton IGA on North Main Street. I hung around this intersection for the better part of an hour, and I took notes. What I learned is that the WALK/DON'T WALK button there have absolutely, positively no effect on anything, whatsoever. Two women came up to the crosswalk, looked and saw the WALK/DON'T WALK button and absently pressed it. They were yakking away. After awhile, the light changed to green in the same number of seconds it took when nobody pressed it. They didn't notice. They crossed the street and went on their way. After that, a man with a small dog approached the intersection. He, too, pressed the button (the man) and seemed very satisfied with himself when the light changed. In fact, it had taken the same number of seconds it would have taken if he had not pressed it. I was watching the proceedings, and pressing start and stop on my stopwatch.

I checked several other WALK/DON'T WALK buttons on the outskirts of town. The one in front of the North Main Street Cleaners across from the fire and police station has no effect. The button on Woods Lane in front of the Georgica Getty station has no effect. They have a feel-good effect.

And so then I went to the new button on Main Street right in front of the movie theatre in the center of town to see what that was all about. And guess what? This new button DOES work, but in a way that is demeaning and insulting to safety, logic and human dignity.

IF YOU STAND THERE AND NEVER PRESS IT, YOU CANNOT CROSS THE STREET. Let me repeat this. IF YOU STAND THERE AND NEVER PRESS IT, YOU WILL NEVER LEGALLY CROSS THE STREET.

Let me tell you what happens if you do NOT press this button. The light is, at first, green to the traffic on Main Street and after awhile, it is green to the traffic on Newtown Lane. Meanwhile, the big red DON'T WALK hand lets you know not to walk. You wait. The light goes red to the traffic on Main Street, then it goes red to the traffic on Newtown Lane. And it is STILL a red palm to pedestrians who might want to cross the street. If you do nothing but stand there, it NEVER changes to the green man. It STAYS the red hand. You cannot cross.

East Hampton C. of C. President Marina Van with 11 seconds to go

By the way, nowhere does it say that you MUST press a button to cross the street. Indeed, people today believe that at any intersection, there should come a time when the green man comes. Here, the green man never comes.

After awhile, if you get a little antsy wondering why the red hand stays there, you look around. Is it broken? Maybe now you see the button. Maybe you don't. If you don't, you just run across the street during the red hand. Or you wait some more, now looking frantically around. You aren't a law breaker. At least, usually. After awhile, it dawns on you that you will be spending the rest of your life there, waiting for the green man. Something really IS wrong. So now you see the button, but you still don't press it. In theory, the button is supposed to just lengthen the time that the green walking man is in place, or make

They Bring You Someplace Nice And Bring You Peacefully Back

Saturday night, mid-summer, Sag Harbor: how do you envision yourself? Sipping margaritas, laughing with friends, catching a play at Bay Street, counting sailboats in the harbor at sunset? Or are you sitting behind the wheel chewing on your fingernails in frustration at the foot of Main Street after circling the town for a parking spot three times? Are you considering bagging your plans because the possibility of finding a place to leave your car is looking bleaker with each successive left-hand turn? No! You should be lounging on the porch of the American Hotel or strolling down the pier in the soft evening breeze. It's a weekend in the summer in the Hamptons, and that should bring a smile to your face. Your ability to relax should not rest on the transportation situation of the area.

What if I told you that transportation could add a hint of romance to your evenings? Maybe "getting there" doesn't have to be the chore of the evening, and "getting home" doesn't have to be the dreaded end. After all, isn't life supposed to be a journey to be enjoyed, not a destination to reach? What better way to enjoy the journey than to take to the water at sunset to cruise from Three Mile Harbor to Sag Harbor, to savor dinner and a film before your moonlit ride home?

Proposed "water taxis," an idea now being considered by several East End towns, would not only connect the North and South Fork, but would also potentially be a link between villages in the Hamptons. The taxis would only run during the summer season, when traffic problems are at their worst and zipping along the water, exposed to the elements, actually sounds pleasurable. The water taxis would be small motor boats that would carry between 12 and 20 passengers.

I imagine a world where we cruise from town to town on the water instead of sitting twiddling our thumbs in traffic jams on Route 27. Imagine yourself at the end of a long night in Sag Harbor, your belly warm with seafood and wine, the chill off the water creeping into a warm summer night. You wander down the street licking an ice cream cone and, as you weave in between jammed cars stopped in the confusion of Main Street, you sigh happily at the decision not to bring your own car. You are standing at the waterfront, waiting to hail a cab home. Only this cab is not yellow, doesn't advertise for Viagra on its roof, doesn't even have wheels!

> It's a fact: people find water soothing. Now ask yourself: do people find traffic soothing?

"What a strange-looking cab," you think, as you realize the sidewalk below you is actually a dock and your cab is actually a boat. Instead of falling asleep with your head against the glass as the driver waits at a red light, you are awakened by the mist of the Long Island Sound spraying your cheeks in the moonlight.

A small group shares the journey back to the North Fork, or to Shelter Island, Riverhead, or perhaps even East Hampton, and you find yourself searching the navy waters for night life, as the boat leaves Sag Harbor a glowing dot in the distance. Every spray off the water offers the momentary possibility of a whale beneath. The simple fact that the potential, no matter how unlikely, exists of having to slow down for a crossing whale instead of an indecisive squirrel is enough to make a supporter out of me.

It's a fact: people find water soothing. Now ask yourself: do people find traffic soothing? The emotion evoked from the presence of water is just about the most opposing emotion to that aroused from the presence of traffic, and we now have a choice between the two. Also, what better way to shake off the smell of a bar than a ride through the thick, salty air rising off the cool water? Wouldn't you rather smell like fish than cigarettes? Actually, don't answer that.

You will take the scenic ride home, skip all the traffic lights, and feel the natural reward of replacing the lurch of potholes with the bounce of waves. You'll get a chance to gaze at the full moon or a star-filled sky as your boat whips you away from the shelter of trees. Plus, you don't have to drive, so it was okay to order that second bottle of wine for the table.

Sometimes it's easy to forget that we are island people. Here's our chance to bring back the island culture. Next thing you know there will be a hammock outside every store and you'll have to wake the owner to ask about the price of a coconut. But until then, I'll be happy watching the wake of my taxi mark the highway of the water with the foamy remnants of my jourhim appear earlier, or both. But now there is NO green man.

Human nature being what it is, however, eventually, maybe just out of some irrational belief that since everything is broken the button might do SOMETHING, you press it and, after awhile, lo and behold, when the red traffic light comes on the next time, the red hand disappears and turns to a green man! Hallelujah. What happens after that I timed. After five seconds, the countdown above the green walking man turns on. It reads 30, then 29 and so forth. And when it gets down to 5, the green walking man starts to blink, and then at 0 it turns to a red hand. That's what happens.

A very expensively dressed couple came up to the crosswalk, the woman carrying shopping bags and chatting away, the man looking this way and that, and the man saw in front of him the countdown going 3, 2, 1, red hand (from when a man a few seconds in front of him used it).

He reached over and pressed the button. He would shorten the time it would take for the red hand to turn back to the green man, he believed. But it didn't turn back right away. So he pressed it again, but harder. And this time, the red hand turned into the green man and the man, satisfied, ushered his lady out into the crosswalk to cross the street. At which time the countdown began. He seemed happy. He was a man. He was in control. .

After this, I spent two days going to every village and town on the East End that has a street corner with a WALK/DON'T WALK button on it, and I experimented with pressing these buttons in Greenport, Riverhead, Westhampton Beach, Hampton Bays, East Quogue, Southampton, Bridgehampton and Sag Harbor and I can tell you that new or old, absolutely none of them did anything to affect the time it took for any of the lights to change.

They are a fraud. Except for the one on Main Street in East Hampton which could force you in desperation to try to cross the street against the red, against the law and in fear for your life. I called the State of New York to tell them of my findings. I wondered if, besides this insult to pedestrians on Main Street, East Hampton, any of them anywhere else on Long Island work.

"They all work," he said.

How much do one of these WALK/DON'T WALK buttons cost us taxpayers? I asked.

"A million dollars," he said.

This may be the biggest scandal in the State of New York since the Tammany Hall Scandals of 1927. Remember you read it first in Dan's Papers.

I also checked on the red traffic cones in the middle of the street which have signs on them reading STATE LAW: YIELD TO PEDESTRIANS IN CROSSWALKS. They DO work. A pedestrian starts across the street. A motorist sees the sign and stops. On the days I conducted this study, nobody got run down. In fact, often the pedestrians and motorists, even though they didn't know one another, exchanged smiles and waves.

Thanks for not running me down. No problem. You're welcome. These signs, unlike the WALK/DON'T WALK buttons, are taxpayers' money well spent.

My advice? Stay home under the bed until things clear up. For food, get takeout. For everything else order over the Internet. Let them come to you. It's not your problem.

Martha Stewart

A Good Thing

By Jerry Cimisi

Martha Stewart has for so long been ensconced in the public consciousness, and is suffering from so public a fall, that perhaps much of the particulars of her climb to fame and success are now little considered.

Martha Helen Kostrya was born in 1941, in Jersey City, New Jersey; she grew up in Nutley in the same Garden State. Even as a youth, Martha was a hard-working perfectionist. She did well in school and went to Barnard — where, in addition to her studies, she worked as a model. She had intended to major in chemistry, but instead studied art, European history, and architectural history. Perhaps she drew an aesthetic from those subjects that later translated into perfect pies and coordinating draperies — and an extraordinary business sense.

Soon after college she married a law student, Andrew Stewart, and a daughter, Alexis, was born in 1965. Her marriage to Stewart ended when Martha filed for divorce in 1990, on the same day her book, Weddings, was published. She kept Stewart's name, though, as it had already become her own trademark.

She had continued to model after college, but her first real job was as a stockbroker in the late 60s and early 70s. In 1973, she and her husband moved out of the city to Westport, Connecticut, where they remodeled an 1805 farmhouse. So we can see the beginnings of the Martha we know right there. Soon she opened a catering business from the house. By the 1980s she was writing columns and articles on cooking, gardening, etc. for Family Circle magazine and was appearing on NBC's Today Show. In 1987, she began her affiliation with Kmart.

In 1990, while Weddings became a bestseller, she began Martha Stewart Living magazine. In 1993, From Martha's Kitchen appeared on the Food Network. Home and Garden TV soon followed, with From Martha's Garden.

Martha's "time" and the socioeconomic interest of the country perfectly coincided. In the midst of the booming 90s, while stocks and dotcoms soared, while everyone was using a surplus of greenbacks to put in more expensive windows in the house, erect an antique potting shed in the yard, and entertain more lavishly, Martha was our guide and muse.

She was also, not surprisingly, a resident of the Hamptons, owning two homes in East Hampton, that most expensive of East End enclaves. She perfectly fit the new Hamptons scene that had replaced the Old Guard — a Polish girl from New Jersey who had made it all on her own.

Not that everything was all pinafores and tea parties, however. Martha had a running battle with her neighbor, real estate developer Harry Macklowe. She claimed that the fences and shrubbery Macklowe had placed on the edge of her property were, in fact, on her property. There was the infamous 1997 incident with the landscaper, a young man from Port Jefferson Station. The landscaper and a crew were on the Macklowe property and were about to call an end to a long day — it was after dark — when Martha showed up in the driveway, demanding to know who put up that fence along her property. The landscaper proclaimed he had no idea. In a suit he filed against Martha, the landscaper claimed the maven of domesticity not only cursed at him and used the "f" word, but also indifferently pinned him between her vehicle and the electronic security box. He said that only because the car's side view mirror gave way was he able to escape serious harm and jump into the bushes. Martha countersued him for slander. The case sort of died in the courts, but not before adding another unfortunate affirmation to Martha's image as someone who could be, at times, more than difficult.

(Incidentally, Macklowe was fined by East Hampton Town in 2000, for landscaping a wetlands area and putting up that fence.)

At any rate, Martha had become as much a character in our culture as any president and perhaps served the same function as the Greek gods: she had furies and foibles and great powers. She was head of Martha Stewart Omnimedia and a billionaire. She was envied, feared and adored.

She was, of course, the brunt of much comedy.

Jay Leno: "Martha Stewart has been charged with lying to the government. That's illegal, unless you're going to start a war."

Conan O'Brien: "Tom Ridge announced a new color-coded system.... Champagne fuchsia means we're being attacked by Martha Stewart."

Craig Kilborn: Martha Stewart was convicted of four counts of lying and obstruction of justice and could serve up to twenty years in Congress."

Dennis Miller: "Martha Stewart showed her audience how to make quick burning Yule logs out of freshly shredded financial statements."

When Martha Stewart was asked on a recent interview (before her conviction) with Barbara Walters if this sort of thing bothered her, Stewart said no, they are just doing their job.

She may have been keeping a stiff upper lip. Which, according to Amy Fisher, the former "Long Island Lolita" who now writes a column for The Long Island Press, she will need to do a lot of in prison. On what Martha might expect all, with the North Fork Bank. I do it mostly, I think, because of the friendliness of the banking staff, and because I admire Kanas' style. But mostly, I think I do it because John Kanas has successfully followed the American dream.

It has benefited him, it has benefited the bank, the community and the banking business as a whole, and you can't get any better than that.

Last week, John Kanas spoke to more than 300 people at a luncheon sponsored by the Advancement for Commerce, Industry and Technology at the Hilton Hotel in Melville. And he spoke about taxes.

"I don't think it's good public policy to have tax cuts that favor the wealthy at this particular time," he said. "It's a waste."

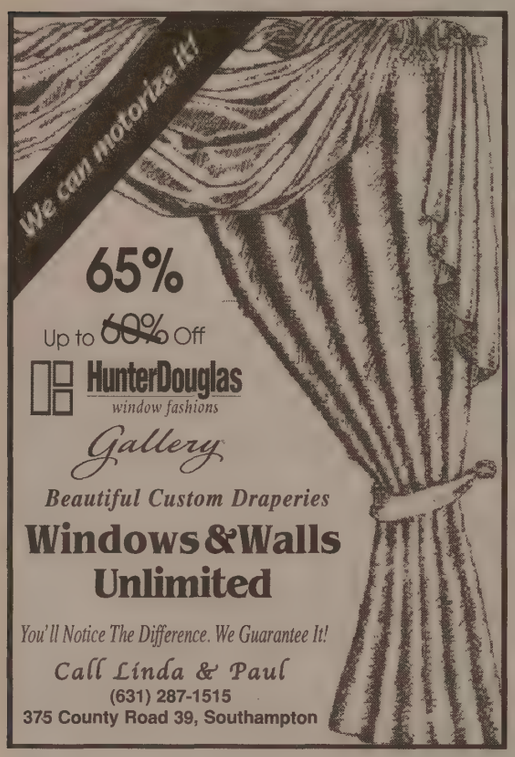

Someone asked him whether or not it was true such tax cuts benefited him and he said it certainly was. However, it is "the masses that are in need."

Kanas makes about $8 million a year. There are others in the business world disturbed by how the tax cuts mostly help the rich. Notably among such businessmen are billionaires Warren Buffett and Bill Gates, Sr., the father of the Microsoft chairman.

Kanas commented on the trend to outsourcing, hiring people in India or the Philippines to handle customer service calls. "If you think outsourcing is a fad and it's something we could stop by adopting protectionist measures, you're sadly mistaken. We want to learn more about the whole outsourcing model," he said. He and some other executives from North Fork recently returned from a trip to India.

He also predicted that the next round of bank mergers will probably be led by banks from abroad, most notably Europe. He said that the American economy might look as if it is growing slowly, but it is growing at a far faster pace than the smaller European economies.

After Kanas' speech, a White House spokesman responded to a Newsday reporter's request for a comment on Kanas' speech by saying, "the President's tax relief agenda has resulted in significant benefits for all Americans. It doesn't pick winners and losers."

In any case, there was Pelosi on Thursday morning in Riverhead, trailed by reporters, trying to find someone to turn himself in to. The judge sent him away. No charges were pending at that time.

At the arraignment on Tuesday, which had come after of a Grand Jury indictment the day before, Suffolk County District Attorney Thomas Spota noted that the long delay since a grand jury had been summoned to look into the murder fourteen months ago was largely because defense attorneys had obstructed efforts to bring evidence before the panel. He specifically mentioned a laptop computer, which controlled the burglar alarm and which Pelosi had access to on the day of the murder.

Now, sometime this summer or fall, a jury will be empanelled and Daniel Pelosi will be tried for murder in the second degree. He claims to be innocent.

...but the other guy said he'd give me their special promotional price and a free seafood dinner for two.

How could you go wrong?

And I would also save a few bucks. You know how it is.

How was I to know that the free dinner would be in that hole in the ground that was supposed to be my pool.

On its own salad.

I don't know what to do. The other guy is gone. His phone is disconnected.

Now my wife isn't talking to me.

My next door neighbor looks at me and says "Grribbit, grribbit. I'm going to call the town about your frog farm".

George, please help me out.

A little far fetched?

Maybe. Maybe not.

We've been designing, building and maintaining award winning pools and spas out here for over 30 years.

Quite a few pool and spa companies have come and gone in that time.

No free seafood dinners. Just fair prices and a sparkling clear pool.

The Sheltered Islander By Sally Flynn

Observations of an Islander #291
Peep the Faith

When I was in high school and going through my teen angst, searching for the meaning of life, I came across a saying on a Hallmark calendar: "Faith is the bird that feels the light and sings while the dawn is still dark." For years, I thought that was a profound statement of faith. I used it as a pithy expression to bolster people in doubt. I sounded so literate and enlightened. Now, with the wisdom of age and experience, I have learned the true meaning of that saying. I know now that it is a warning against a terrible force that comes in the night to steal my peace, a force that robs my soul of restorative rest and tranquility.

The value of quality sleep increases in direct proportion to the age of the body at rest. I like to sleep with the window open, even just a crack, as soon as the temperature is above freezing. I love the smell of fresh air. I sleep better. I look forward to the smell of the spring night air.

But my rest is ruined by...the Peeper. The birds are starting to come back now and usually they are very good about staying quiet all night...until about an hour before dawn...then it happens...one little peep. One bird, whom I call the Peeper, lets out one little peep for no apparent reason, without any provocation or justification. It breaks through the silence and the darkness, like the opening of a can of Coke in the theater. You wait for a noisy moment in the movie and try to time popping that tab just right, but it never works...everybody in the row ahead of you and behind you, who bought the $3 watered down crappy cokes, KNOWS you snuck in a Coke. You feel so ashamed — richer, but ashamed.

I hear that one little peep and I know what is going to follow... fifteen seconds later, there's another peep from the Peeper. He got away with it the first time, so he goes for a second peep. Like trying to stealthily pass gas in church. It's a very tricky process involving intense control and timing. Then, there's a few more peeps from other birds that weren't brave enough to peep first, but now that the peep barrier has been broken, they all join in! Pretty soon, they're all peeping and then somebody gets bold and lets out a chirp, then they all start peeping, chirping and cawing ... that's it... I'm up before dawn!

These worthless creatures, that poop on our lawn furniture and expect bird seed offered in expensive feeders, show a complete and callous disregard for the health and well being of the people who buy their bird seed. I rented a house on the island once, with a woods in the back. I threw birdseed on the back deck all winter so they'd have food. By spring, I had more than 12 pairs of cardinals waiting on the deck every morning. They got very bold as the weather warmed up. They would line up at dawn and start to tap the sliding glass door with their beaks. My back deck looked like a platoon of Redcoats organizing a raid. I tried to be reasonable and I explained to them that I didn't mind feeding them, but they had to be quiet in the morning. I don't think they cared. As one of them said to me, "What am I? My brother's peeper?"

I bought Tom Damiani's wonderful "Birdworks" CD that allowed me to listen and then try to learn the different calls of island birds. I thought if I could identify the culprit, I could wait in the woods some night and catch him in the act, throw a net over him and glue his beak shut and provide hours of extra sleep for everyone on the block. Tom's CD covered chirps and just a few peeps, but none of them sounded like that stealthy single peep that rippled through the darkness of the morning in search of my ears like the single ping of sonar in search of an enemy sub.

Then, I remembered the quote, "Faith is the bird that feels the light and sings while the dawn is still dark." All this time, I was looking for a male bird, assuming that only a male would be inconsiderate enough to wake up the neighborhood. No... it was Faith, a girl bird with a major attitude. Faith is the bird who feels the light and peeps while the dawn is still dark....

behind bars, Fisher says Stewart will be at the whims of prison guards; there will be strip searches after every visitor, cheap make up and no hair dye. Martha's hair will be gray when she gets out of prison and "she will no doubt be wearing a Hermes scarf or hat."

Martha will have her 200 minutes a month on the phone, a $290 personal account that only her family can contribute to — and she, though minutely, through her own labors. She will be given a job like other inmates, making between 11 and 33 cents and hour. Because of her fame she may be given the most degrading tasks, such as scrubbing toilets.

But Fisher believes the Domestic Diva will come out of prison unbroken and with greater resolve.

This, of course, remains to be seen. In the meantime, who will replace her as our icon for all things social and cultural? Anna Nicole Smith, now that she has lost all those pounds?

At any rate, Martha Stewart has suffered her own Greek tragedy, in which a fatal flaw has seemingly undone what she worked so hard to achieve. The last act or acts of Martha Stewart's life remain to be written, and she can be the only author of them. One of Martha's East Hampton properties is up for sale, but it's not hard to imagine she will return to the other one and pick up her business with the renewed exhilaration of a return to freedom. She may have fallen a great deal, but she has accomplished phenomenal things, and that's not something even prison can efface.

Authors Writing About The Hamptons

Author Martin Gottfried has written more than a dozen books, including biographies of Danny Kaye, George Burns (The One Hundred Year Dash) and Bob Fosse (All His Jazz). His book Broadway Musicals is now in its eighth printing and is considered the definitive text on the subject of American musical theatre. Gottfried's most recent book, which was published in October 2003, is the biography Arthur Miller: His Life and Work, published by DaCapo Press. This section is set in October 1956 in the Springs.

Arthur Miller: His Life and Work

By Martin Gottfried

Chapter 20

Home again in October for Arthur's 41st birthday, the couple began looking for another farm in Connecticut while renting a temporary retreat in the oceanfront hamlet of Amagansett on the South Fork of Long Island. The place belonged to a former stage manager named Jeffrey Potter and his wife Penny, both friends of Miller friends. It was set on a one-hundred acre site that, like so much of the Hamptons, was once used for potato farming. To one side was a riding stable, on the other, the home of the artist Willem de Kooning (de Kooning would paint a portrait of Marilyn Monroe. It is hanging in the Museum of Modern Art.) The farm house itself faced on winding, arboreal Town Lane, minutes away from the painterly bay beaches at Louse Point and Barnes Landing, a few miles from the ocean dunes. Arthur and Marilyn would drive down to that Atlantic shore, rolling onto the beach at Nappeague Lane in their new Jeep, at the time the only kind of car that was manageable in the sand. They would walk alongside the sea on this long stretch of beach, with its sloping dune grass, a considerable change from the flat, wide, duneless beaches she knew near Los Angeles. Here, as spring turned to early summer, Marilyn would watch Arthur flycasting in the surf (Robert Whitehead called him " a first rate carpenter, a second rate fisherman"). Wearing a red baseball cap and baggy gray swim trunks, he was not quite the male physical equal of even the now chubby Monroe, splashing in the surf in her one piece white bathing suit.

It was in Amagansett that he wrote a touching story for and about Marilyn, and "her fierce tenderness toward all that lived." Called Please Don't Kill Anything [footnote: later published in Esquire] it is a short piece about a woman upset because a couple of flycasters, standing in the ocean surf, are discarding their inedible catch and leaving the fish to die, floundering in the sand while still alive. The man who accompanies this woman is amused and charmed enough to help her throw the flapping fish back into the sea, while explaining the universal food chain and life's need for death. When their rescue effort is complete, she apologizes for having been so anxious, but explains that "they were alive, and if nobody's going to eat them..." However the man, rather than thinking her foolish, is grateful for the lesson he has learned, "a great happiness opening in him that she had laid his hand on the fish which were now swimming in the sea because he had lifted them." And "oh," she says, "how I love you."

The story would seem a fit parable about, and a testament to this marriage at its best, and how Miller perceived it when happiest. To all the questions about what this unlikely and misfit couple had in common, what bound them to each other despite manifest differences, conflicts and displeasures, and what one got from the other, an answer can be found in Please Don't Kill Anything and its story of innocence and knowledge.

75 Images, 100 Years, Countless Memories

A Centennial Photographic Retrospective At The Southold Historical Society's Winter Gallery

By Susan Whitney Simm

Though the debate about which officially came first, Southold or Southampton – both were founded in 1640 – may never be resolved, the rich historical legacies of these two places are indisputable. And in a first of its kind photographic retrospective of the North Fork hamlet of Southold, over seventy-five archival photographs taken between 1850 and 1950 are currently on display downtown at the Society's Winter Gallery in the Prince Building on Main Street.

Jack Appleby and Rosalind Case Newell in front of the Segayan Club, c. 1902

The show, a joint effort between Southold Historical Society and the Southold Free Library, includes some of the earliest photographic images of the historic village, many taken by resident and noted East End photographer Charles H. Meredith (1889-1966). Meredith relocated here from Canada around 1929, and from that point until his death, traveled Long Island taking photographs, focusing on the North Fork. He took over 5,000 photographs during his career, most of which are preserved through the Meredith Collection at the Society. The show also includes works from the library's Whitaker Collection, and others from private sources.

The images chosen for this show by Vanessa Patterson, a Stony Brook University student and Southold resident who spent over a year as an intern sorting through hundreds of old photographs at the Southold Library, beautifully and nostalgically detail the hamlet's rural quality. Businesses, industries, clubs, and vacationers are just a few topics that are touched upon in the show.

One image features a modest building, which was actually a private club founded by the Appleby Family of Peconic. The club, called Segayan, was named for the last Indian to live on Indian Neck. It was created so that friends and neighbors would have a place to get together and picnic along the shore. Membership was limited to just twenty families, and they would meet at the clubhouse on the first Saturday of the month for dinner. In another image, a group of primly dressed ladies belonging to the "Old Maids Club," a local social group, are pictured in front of the bridge to George Harper's house on Young's Avenue.

"This exhibit features some of the images that will be part of our upcoming photographic history of Southold, which will be out this summer," said Society director Geoffrey Fleming.

"Southold 1850-1950: A Photo Retrospective," will be on exhibit through Sunday, May 9. The Winter Gallery is open Fridays from 7-9 p.m., and Saturdays and Sundays from 1-4 p.m. A donation from visitors of $2 is suggested. Contact the Southold Historical Society at (631) 765-5500 for more information, or visit the website www.southoldhistoricalsociety.org

I would like to extend special thanks to Society director Geoffrey Fleming for the information he provided for this story, as well as for supplying the accompanying images. The Southold Historical Society, founded in 1960, owns and maintains over a dozen buildings in Southold that range in date from 1750 to 1900, including several houses, barns, outbuildings, and commercial structures. The Society opens many of these buildings to the public at various times throughout the year, but they can also be opened by appointment. By visiting this exhibit, you are supporting a local historical institution. Be a part of preserving our fascinating past.

North Fork Artist Of The Week

Living Color: The Photography Of Greenport's Bob McInness

The colors in Greenport resident Bob McInnis' photography are so incredible, the first thing I asked him during an interview for Dan's Papers back in October of 2002 was, "But is it real?" "Absolutely," came the artist's reply. After Bob described the almost mystical (and painstaking) way he goes about capturing these vibrant hues, I couldn't stop thinking about Gustav Flaubert and how the writer supposedly looked at the world through pieces of glass of different colors in order to evoke an emotion he would then capture in words.

Bob's images appear every month on the cover of North Fork Country, are part of a new book, The Natural History of New York, and can be viewed on his website at www.bobmcinnis.com. The Century 21 Agawam Albertson Real Estate office in Greenport purchased eleven of Bob's images, and welcomes visitors to view them. Their offices are directly across from Mitchell Park, the new home of the carousel, also captured in living color by the talented lensman. –S.W.Simm, wine@danspapers.com

Haute Reds: Beating The Bordeaux Blues

Jay McInerney, author of Bright Lights, Big City, and spirits columnist for House & Garden, tells a great story about arriving late for a dinner at Manhattan's La Grenouille, only to be confronted by a smug sommelier and a bottle of Bordeaux.

"Jay knows wine," announces the hostess of the dinner party. "He'll guess what we're drinking." McInerney, recalling a dream of standing naked in front of a classroom, sticks his nose in the glass.

"Haut-Brion," he declares to his rapt audience. An audible collective gasp follows. Then, after taking a sip and examining the color, McInerney delivers the punch line: "Nineteen eighty-two."

While such an impressive feat may be beyond the vast majority of us lesser wine enthusiasts, the mystery and legend surrounding the fabled French region do indeed make the wines produced there undeniably intimidating. Add to this the average price of a bottle from a first-growth estate, such as Chateau Latour, and it's easy to make a case for sticking with the tried-and-true reds you already know and, if not love, at least like somewhat.

But there are some relative bargains to be had, even among the 2000 Bordeaux that Wine Spectator magazine hailed as "the vintage of a lifetime." While Chateau Petrus, probably the world's most expensive wine – the 2000 sells for $1500 a bottle at Manhattan's Sherry-Lehman – may be beyond your scope (either ethically or financially), there a few good buys out there that, besides making you look good when you show up for a dinner party, bottle in hand, will make a convert out of even the most Bordeaux-challenged. Below are a few Wine Spectator-rated bottles retailing for $33 and under. (Comments in parentheses are quoted from the magazine.)

Chateau Labégorce Lédé 2000 (Margaux region) received a rating of 92, and is described as "full-bodied... with a dense fruit structure." Suggested retail: $20. Chateau Lagrange 2000 (St.-Julien) received a 93. "Beautifully aromatic, with coffee, cedar and blackberries on the nose." Suggested retail: $33. Chateau Latour Martillac 2000 (Pessac-Léognan), earned a 92 for its "full body, velvety tannins, and long finish." Retail: $25. And Chateau d'Agassac 2000 (Haut-Médoc), rated 90 for its "complex aromas... and ripe fruit finish," retails for a very affordable $15.

If these wines are a challenge to find, or if you are looking for even greater bargains, head over to Sherry-Lehman (679 Madison), not for the Petrus, but for the "Unsung Heroes of Bordeaux Winter

I think it is safe to say that Dan's Papers annual Best of the Best contest has indeed achieved institution status on the East End, and while we all know it's not who wins or loses, it's still a lot more fun to win. And speaking of winners, 2003's lucky award recipients are spotlighted below. Just look for the designation at the end of each restaurant description, and follow the key to find out who won what. The list is impressive, but then so are today's dining options here on the North Fork.

Thomas Lopez creates separate specials menus, complementing his regular card of winners like spinach pasta with chunky lobster, Asian-style breast of duck, and marinated lamb chops in mint demi-glace. Scrumptious desserts and a kid's menu ensure everyone goes home (or upstairs) happy. South Jamesport Ave. and Front Street, South Jamesport. 722-2659. Entrees, $18-$26. (Trueman-Honey, 8/1/03). {Di,S,Sh}

La Cuvee Wine Bar & Bistro at the Greenporter Hotel. Gourmet bistro dining adjoining a hip boutique hotel footsteps from Greenport's vibrant downtown. The casually upscale dining room creates a pleasing environment for a light and adventurous menu. Seafood appetizers like tuna tartar and the sublime mussels in coconut and lemongrass broth bear an unmistakable Asian influence. But executive chef / owner Deborah Rivera's culinary artistry really announces itself when the entrees arrive. Long Island duck in an orange-infused coconut sauce is impressive enough, but topped by her otherworldly Chilean Sea Bass poached in a miso-sesame broth. Exceptional wine list, with by-the-glass offering many pleasant surprises. Entrees, $21-$26. 326 Front Street, Greenport. 477-0066. (Bradbrook, 4/25/03). [B,Wi]

Red Door. Red Alert! Stephan Mazzella, formerly of Lespinasse, has opened a fine new restaurant in Mattituck. His menu is quite versatile and his consistently tasty dishes excite the palate. Typically adventurous and successful is the pan-seared monkfish with a yellow tomato sauce and black olive purée topped by crispy fried leeks. Mazzella's treatment of fish epitomizes Greek and Italian-style preparation at its best. The appetizer of heirloom tomatoes with boccocini mozzarella and fresh basil and balsamic vinegar is a tomato dish for the ages. Innovative desserts, too. Entrees – $16–$28. 13560 Main Rd., Mattituck. 298-4800. (Bradbrook, 6/14/02). [D]

The Seafood Barge. The North Fork restaurant for fish lovers. Owner/manager team of Dick Ehrlich and Betsey Flinn are as fanatical about results as Steinbrenner/Torre. Newly imported executive chef Michael Meehan updates the menu's standards and introduces several of his own specialties. Vichyssoise spiked with crab meat and basil oil was a rousing success. Marinated baby octopus with baby spinach was succulent and tender. As for the fish, the sushi appetizer continues to be stellar. The pan-seared striped bass with a red pepper broth is a revelation. Desserts are sensational. Excellent wine list, particularly local vintages. Entrees $24-$32. Port of Egypt Marina, Rt. 25, Southold. 765-3010. (Bradbrook, 7/26/02). [Lo,Se,Su]

The Shady Lady Restaurant. The Zorn family's vision of stately elegance comes to the North Fork in this grandly unique dining room. Two rooms actually, with dinner jackets de rigueur in the Scarlet Room and a more casual ambience pervading the lodge-like Pine Room. The menu keeps apace with the opulence of the surroundings. Chef Ross Essner's cosmopolitan cooking style is globally savvy, but local-ingredient particular. Especially breathtaking is the lobster risotto with diver scallop and asparagus. A superb cheese plate complements the dessert choices and the wines are as excellently-chosen as they are reasonably-priced. 305 North Road, Greenport. 477-4500. Entrees, $28-$38. (Bradbrook, 7/18/03). {A,Cu,Ser,Spe,W}

Touch of Venice. Top-notch Italian cuisine in a delightful setting on Mattituck Inlet. Named appropriately for location, cuisine and a large mural dominating the dining room, this is family dining par excellence with a sophisticated ambience. Among the kitchen's highlights: Orient Point oysters, chilled but not icy; baby spinach salad with gorgonzola; black angus porterhouse. Manicotti in a fresh, simple tomato sauce is among the many pleasing pasta dishes. Lobster Meat over angel hair pasta, a frequent special, is an exciting dish of imaginative complexity and one of the North Fork's perennial favorites. Cold seafood bruschetta is another special to watch for. Entrees $16-$34. Wickham Avenue at Matt-A-Mar Marina, Mattituck. 298-5851. (Bradbrook, 8/16/02). [L,O]

ART COMMENTARY By Marion Wolberg Weiss

Latin American and Caribbean Art At the Parrish

Art from our Spanish neighbors is not new to either the Parrish Museum or this critic. For example, we can remember the Parrish's excellent exhibition featuring Mexican photographer Graciela Iturbide in the Fall of 2000, work that was both beautiful and political.

Yours truly will never forget the art scene in Havana, Cuba, particularly at the well-known Centro de Arte Contemporaneo Wilfredo Lam. What was especially surprising was the fact that emerging nations aren't afraid to show suffering and injustice. At a local gallery, we also found the feminism of one artist to be refreshing.

Put into this particular context, the Parrish's current show from El Museo del Barrio's permanent collection of Latin American and Caribbean art is pretty tame, politically speaking. This is not to suggest, however, that the works are not valuable or noteworthy. In fact; the opposite is true. There are some extraordinary pieces represented, from archaelogical objects to pieces we don't usually see, like posters and a small painting ("Woman With Black Stockings") by Rufino Tamayo, one of the truly great international artists of our times.

The exhibition's strength lies in its varied media and its focus on cultural traditions associated with abstraction and spirituality. The first piece encountered upon entering the Museum, Juan Sanchez's "The Father, the Son, and The Holy Spirit," highlights these aspects. While the work is not conventional abstraction, it is a compelling and even conceptual representation of cultural contradictions.

Another conceptual and contradictory piece is the visually arresting installation by Pepon Osorio: a bed complete with a bedspread to die for. The spread is the main point here, a lacy, romantic piece covered with dainty bows, pennies and a few candy wraps.

There's a disconcertion at work, however, which leaves us on edge. Is the cover an homage to popular culture, reminding this critic of David Salle of all people, or is there a political meaning here after all? Love (signified by the bed) is not all it's cracked up to be.

Did we really use the "P" word (political)? We sure did.

The exhibition will be on view at Southampton's Parrish Museum until May 16.

HONORING THE ARTIST: NIDIA D'ALLESANDRO

This week's cover has a very special meaning, not only for the many Shelter Island residents who depend on the ferry for transportation, but also for the artist who painted it, Nidia D'Allesandro. The ferry became a symbol for Nidia and her husband, sculptor Luiz Coelho, a kind of Statue of Liberty, welcoming them to Shelter Island's magical world.

Nidia first laid eyes on the ferry over thirty years ago after what is described as a long and difficult trip from Manhattan. "We were invited to a party," Nidia explains. "The hosts sent us a map, and we started out in our Fiat for Long Island. We were afraid because in Brazil, where we lived, maps and cars were not necessary. When we looked at the map, Shelter Island seemed so far away.

"I remember we got hungry and stopped at Hampton Bays for lunch, but we were really lost. As soon as Luiz saw the bridge in Sag Harbor, however, he said, 'Nidia, we are not lost.'"

What seemed to be the longest trip of their lives turned into something wonderful. Nidia recalls that as soon as they got off the ferry in Shelter Island, "It was like landing in another dimension." They continued on their way to their hosts' house in Shorewood, passing "magical forests" full of bamboo which they hadn't seen since their days in Brazil.

Finally, Nidia and Luiz arrived at the estate where the party was being held, beholding a Florentine-style residence, complete with a pier, carriage house, tennis court, gardens, and a goldfish pond.

"We couldn't believe our eyes," Nidia remembers. "We felt bewitched. This party changed our destiny."

Taken with the setting, Nidia and Luiz were elated when they were invited to stay for a week by their hosts, who then helped them rent a small house near the water that summer. Their dream was to move permanently to "Paradise," as Nidia called Shelter Island.

Five years later, they did, building a house on the ground that their landlords sold them.

Nidia is just as crazy about Shelter Island as she ever was, saying time and time again that the community is like her family. "The people are just the best we've ever known," she articulates. In the meantime, Nidia continues painting local scenes of her beloved environment, recently expanding her perspective to include the North Fork, with its produce stands, barns, fields, and trucks.

It's clear that Nidia has no intention of ever leaving Shelter Island, although she did say she'd love to visit the Medeira Islands. But even that prospect fades everytime she looks at the ferry reminding her of "the best years of our lives."

preview: hello mrs. president...by gordin & christiano

SilvaRoad Productions and American Traditions Mgmt. in association with The Theatre for the New City is staging a concert reading of Hello Mrs. President, a new musical comedy about the first woman president, who just happens to be an African American cleaning lady/ lawyer. We all must wear more than one hat in these hectic modern-day times. The farcical fantasy with book, music and lyrics by Phoebe Legere will come to life at 8 p.m. this Friday and Saturday in the newly refurbished Community Theatre located at 155 First Avenue.

For fans of Phoebe Legere the zany evening promises to be a joyous celebration of womanhood and family. With sixteen scintillatingly fabulous new songs, the hilarious and thought-provoking story about the first woman president delivers a healing message of love, unity and peace, which will linger in your mind long after the final curtain. We will be reminded of what could be in the world, and we will hopefully refuse to settle whenever instead, we can easily take an action to change things for the better. After all, laughter is a unifying healing balm and is a common thread which nurtures the human spirit, forever reminding us of our oneness with one another.

Ms. Legere will accompany the stellar cast of performers on a baby grand piano, so be prepared to be dazzled by the gorgeous voices of this amazing cast. Featured in the leading roles are Marvel Allen as Mrs. President/ Marylou Washington and Michael-David Gordon as her husband Thornton, the Minister of the Church of Infinite Love and Prosperity. Ms. Allen is a crystal clear mezzo-soprano, who last appeared at The Classical Theatre of Harlem. Mr. Gordon is a gifted tenor baritone, who has appeared on and off Broadway as well as on television. Daria Hardeman, who was seen on Broadway in The Full Monty and was in the original off Broadway cast of Bat Boy, will portray Bunny Caligula, as well as Curtis Zeusgroomer. The cast also features Alexandra Foucard, Charlotte Dooling, Laura Newman, Renauld White, Chantal Georges, Ralph De Matthews, and Gilla Roos model Moniere.

That Ms. Legere is a musical genius who refuses to be pigeon-holed is of course evident to anyone who witnessed her performances in the late eighties and early nineties at Bobby Van's, where she held court weekly. Playing the piano, often accompanied by a guitarist and/ or guest stars, and many times throwing in a mad riff on her accordion, Phoebe played her original songs and the classics. Her trademark back then was any song for a dollar, and she would, indeed, perform any song requested in her five octave range to the amazement of all challengers.

Patrick Christiano, who is directing the staging as well as Executive Producing the project with Crystal Field, the Artistic Director of The Theatre for the New City, has worked for months with Ms. Legere on developing the new book. They make a stimulating team and are very excited by the direction the piece has taken, but still consider it a work in progress. They plan to stage possibly two or three more concert readings, before mounting a full scale production off Broadway. They are also in discussions with Josh Gladstone, the Artistic Director of Guild Hall's John Drew Theatre, to bring the musical out east the weekend after Labor Day. If the dates can be worked out, the musical might even show up in John Drew's Fringe Theatre Festival, a sort of marathon play reading series, which will take place on Memorial Day Weekend as well as the following weekend. Mr. Gladstone is currently looking for original works for the festival and can be contacted at 631-324-0806 concerning submissions. In the meantime get yourself to the Big Apple for a rollickingly funny, smart, and sexy evening of musical theatre.

The Concert Reading of Hello Mrs. President will take place in the Community Theatre at The Theatre for the New City, 155 First Avenue (between 9th and 10th) at 8 p.m. Friday and Saturday March 26 and 27. For tickets call 212-254-1109.

Guy de Fraumeni's Hollywood In The Hamptons

Spartan

Spartan is more apt a title for the much hooted and ballyhooed playwright, David Mamet, than it is for the current movie he's written, and, you might say, directed. His spartan-terse writing style has been lauded for his "ear" for language. They must be small ears, for his sentences and words are short. Four-letter words are his favorites. If this is what he hears – those little shell-like ears should be washed out with soap. Moreover, the language goes with the spartan-rigorous ways of manly force that have preoccupied his stylistic frontal attacks for about 30 years. It deals with the tough stuff a "man" has to do in life. In Spartan, a "secret" Secret Service Man (it would be un-Mamet to fill in vagueness) has gotten the job of saving the President's daughter, who has been kidnapped by ruthless Arabs (who else?) into an international sex-slave trafficking of young blonde women. Only Mamet would confuse this already silly premise by making the president's daughter a redhead who has recently dyed her hair. Is the sex slave's value diminished if the fur cuffs don't match the collar? Was the president's daughter targeted as part of some massive conspiracy? Or, was the wrong girl snatched? Or, is it all a charade? Or, are there any answers? Maybe, it didn't happen.

For those fans of the Times double-crostics, or Mamet's dabbling, playwise, in movies with double-cross gamesmanship such as House of Games, and The Spanish Prisoner, they'll know the surprise, twist endings are not nearly as satisfyingly ingratiating as his unreal, watch-me-switch-the-cards-around-see-how-fast-I-am-flim-flamming. If you like this kind of Three-Card Monte, Spartan has it in spades. No hearts behind the stiff-as-nails line delivery. No clubs to beat out the competition of films with something to say. And, certainly no diamonds under the roomful of the pony's droppings. This movie is so hard-boiled that the line, "Man to man, can you get me on that plane?" is delivered by the actress, Tia Texada.

Appearing as the chiseled-in-stone action hero is Val Kilmer, performing as if he'd never had acting experience, stolidly doing what "a man's gotta do." Even his hair is forcefully set. Like Kilmer's jaw and other expressionless features, every strand of hair is set like cement, not daring to crack under any circumstances. He has been training youngsters at some (hushhush) military installation doing things that cannot be spoken about (remember, hushhush!) Just be sure you know it's damn deadly. When he's gotta do whatever he's gotta do, he does it with youthful proteges Derek Luke and the aforementioned Tia Texada. In the Mametudinal way, things get as hairy as Austin Powers's chest, fluttering in the blasts of fatiguing plot turns and overly battered set pieces we've had to take before. When American power and evil politicians were dragged in (like the wandered-in cameo by William H. Macy) I knew it was time to vent my aggression on the Times crossword puzzle. I try not to have too many cross words with movie maker.

Guy-Jean de Fraumeni is the producer/writer/director of award-winning European and American feature films. He has been a judge at major film and TV award competitions, including the Oscars, the Emmy's and various film festivals. He is assisted by Sarah Halsey.

Silvia Lehrer's Cooking Column

South Beach – the name conjures up images of days gone by, of the Art Deco District of old Miami Beach, the playful architecture of its small hotels and Lincoln Road. The revival of this historic district began about 15 years ago. Before the wreckers were on their way, the late Barbara Capitman, whose voice was the clarion call for preservationists in this resort town's district, led a lengthy, sometimes losing, ultimately successful fight as the leader of the art deco movement.

Today South Beach thrives on cultural tourism. Restaurants, galleries, shops, night life and brighter than ever art deco buildings with their pastel Art Moderne architectural style – the juxtaposition of the scantily clad young who have fallen in love with the area and of some of the elderly who have not forsaken their retirement hotels make up the social texture.

South Beach, with its combination of great weather and colorful points of interest, is the perfect setting for a variety of major events. The South Beach Wine & Food Festival took place this year on March 5, 6 and 7. Festival sponsors included: Food and Wine magazine, Florida International University, Burdines, Kitchen Aid and a host of others. Over three days, celebrants enjoyed the wine, spirits and food tastings, cooking demonstrations, wine seminars and meals prepared by extraordinary chefs and cookbook authors. The participants included Tom Colicchio of Craft, Nobu Matsuhisa of Nobu and Marcus Samuelson of Aqua in New York City, Dean Fering of The Mansion on Turtle Creek, Dallas, Texas, The Food Network's Rachel Ray, Tyler Florence and Emeril Lagasse, and notable authors such as Steven Raichlen of the Barbecue Bible and Beer Can Chicken cookbooks and Rose Levy Beranbaum of Cake and Bread Bible cookbook fame.

Individual cooking seminars held in tents, walking distance from the beach, featured Tyler Florence, who captivated his audience with paella, and adorable Rachel Ray, who, with her quirky but infectious laugh, didn't have to a cook a thing but did. Tom Colicchio focused on artichokes and interesting ways to prepare them. Steven Raichlen gave a spirited discourse on the joys and origins of barbecue, from his famous beer can chicken to salmon grilled on a cedar plank to the art of grilling glazed pineapple. Nobu satisfied his non-sashimi (raw fish) audience with paper thin slices of seasoned fresh salmon drizzled with hot oil to cook the fish. I was lucky to have a tasting of Dean Feering's smoky grilled quail at his seminar and a myriad of delicious offerings from celebrated Florida chefs and restaurants in the Grand Tasting Tent. Clearly, South Beach was the place to be March 5, 6 and 7th.

RACHEL RAY'S SALMON WITH CHAMPAGNE SAUCE

Rachel Ray of TV's Food Network prepared her date-meal recipe below with 1/2 cup cream. I think just 2-3 tablespoons could win someone's heart.
Serves 2

2 six-ounce salmon filets
Salt and freshly ground pepper
2 tablespoons extra-virgin olive oil
1 large or 2 small shallots, finely chopped
1 split dry champagne
1 whole vanilla bean, split
2-3 tablespoons chopped fresh flat-leaf parsley

1. Heat a nonstick skillet over medium-high heat. Season fish with salt and pepper. Add 1 tablespoon olive oil to the pan. When hot put in the fish. Cook salmon 3 minutes on each side, 5 minutes if you like your fish well done. Transfer fish to serving plate or dinner plates and tent with foil to keep warm.

2. Add remaining tablespoon of olive oil to the pan, pouring once around in a slow stream. Add shallots and cook 2 minutes. Add champagne to the pan and cook to reduce by half. Scrape the seeds from the split vanilla bean into the champagne. Pour cream to the pan and reduce heat to low. Simmer 5 minutes. Pour sauce over fish, garnish with parsley and serve.

Adapted from Rachel Ray's recipe on The Food Network

BRAISED ARTICHOKES
IN OLIVE OIL AND WHITE WINE

The following recipe is adapted from Craft Restaurant chef/owner Tom Colicchio's globe artichoke preparation at the South Beach Wine & Food Festival.
Serves 6 as appetizer

6 globe artichokes
2 lemons cut in half
1/3 cup extra-virgin olive oil
1 medium onion, peeled and thinly sliced
2 small leeks, dark green leaves discarded, washed and thinly sliced
2 small carrots peeled and thinly sliced
1 rib celery, trimmed and thinly sliced
4 cloves garlic, peeled
Coarse (kosher) salt and freshly ground pepper
1 3/4 cups dry white wine
2 bay leaves
4 sprigs each of thyme and tarragon

1. Trim the stem of each artichoke and pare away each stem's green outer layer. Sprinkle with lemon juice. Snap off the hard outer leaves of artichokes until only the central core of leaves are left. Cut off about 1 1/2 inches from the top of each cone, taking care to eliminate all the dark green. Rub all the cut edges with the halved lemon.

2. Cut trimmed artichokes into quarters and scrape away and discard the inner choke with a paring knife. Squeeze lemon halves into a bowl of fresh water and soak artichoke quarters.

3. Meanwhile, heat 3 tablespoons olive oil in a large Dutch-sauté pan and add the onion, leek, carrots and celery. Season with salt and pepper, then reduce the heat to medium-low and slowly cook the aromatic vegetables, stirring occasionally, until they are tender but not brown, about 20 minutes. Add garlic and cook for another minute.

4. Drain the artichokes and add them to the pot. Add a little more salt and pepper, remaining olive oil to coat the artichokes, the bay leaves and half the thyme and tarragon. Mix gently and arrange the artichokes in a single layer in the pan. Pour in the wine and enough water to cover the artichokes, and bring to a gentle boil. Reduce heat to a simmer. With cover ajar, gently simmer until the artichokes can be easily pierced with a knife, about 30 minutes.

5. Coarsely chop the remaining thyme and tarragon. Add herbs to the artichokes and remove pot from heat. Serve the braised artichokes, garnished with the aromatic vegetables, warm or at room temperature.

Dining In The Hamptons

Sushi And... Champagne? Serving Wine With (Almost) Anything

Years ago, the rule for pairing food and wine was simple: white wine with fish and chicken, red wine with red meat, and beer with everything else. If you were throwing a Super Bowl party with pizza and chili, you brought out the Bud. Backyard barbecue? Chilled jug wine and more Bud. Who had ever heard of serving wine with pizza? But then, who had ever heard of white pizza?

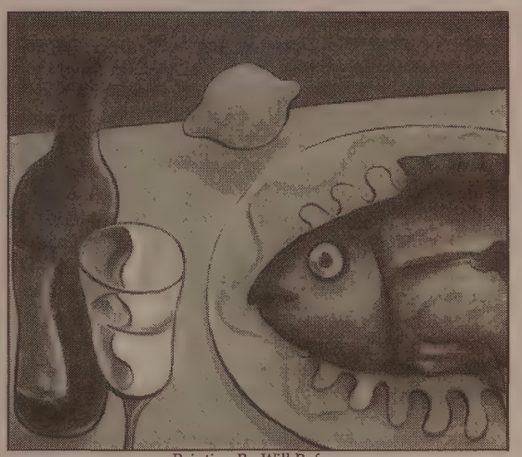

Although this axiom worked well enough with the limited types of wines available then – jugs blasphemously labeled "Chablis" (the sublime fruity whites from the eponymous French region) on the low end, and very good, reasonably priced Bordeaux (alas!) on the high – now our global availability of different types of wine has rendered this simplistic rule obsolete.

Today's wine drinker is also far more sophisticated when it comes to food. The world is a smaller place, and the proliferation of what I call "multi-cultural cuisines," such as the fusion (some would say "con-fusion") concept that gave way to Pan-Asian and Euro-Japanese, for example, is today recognized as being just as significant as microclimates in wine regions. With all of this wonderfully abundant variety, today you are far more likely to hear suggestions, as opposed to edicts, regarding which wine to serve with which dish. In other words, the pairing of food and wine has become a much more subjective, hence personal, pursuit.

Some classic serving suggestions, such as Cabernet Sauvignon with grilled steak (try the 1999 Charles Krug from California if you can find it), remain timeless. But you might also offer a hearty Australian Shiraz (the charmingly Down Under way to say "Syrah"), such as the modestly priced Yellow Tail, with equally good results. The reason these wines work with the steak is that both share similarities of body and texture. They are complimentary, just as light, dry, slightly acidic Muscadet from France's Loire Valley is perfect for washing down raw oysters.

Contrasting wine and food can also work. A semi-dry white, such as Peconic Bay's 2002 Riesling, would not only be just as delicious with the oysters, it would be a more interesting choice. The key here is balance. If either the food or the wine overpowers the other, the one overpowered will taste weak while the conquerer will overwhelm the palate.

But when the combination of a certain food and wine work well together – such as English stilton cheese and Port – the whole is greater than the parts, no matter the pedigree of either. Wine tastes different with food than without (and vice versa), and both taste better when paired well. If this from www.bravenews.net

Painting By Will Rafuse

sounds complicated, it's not. A few simple, updated rules will help you achieve synergy, even with today's exciting mix of cuisines.

Japanese/Sushi – Sparkling wines, such as Champagne, compliment this cuisine and refresh the palate as their acidity helps cool some of the heat from wasabi. Prefer contrast? Try traditional Japanese plum wine instead of sake. Its sweet fruitiness balances the salt. Why do French fries and Coke go so well together? Same reason.

Chinese/Szechwan – Fruitiness is also the operative word here, balancing the spice and salt. A Long Island Viognier is a winning combination with shrimp with black bean sauce. A good contrasting choice would be a dry rosé.

Tex-Mex/Southwest – A crisp, steel fermented Chardonnay is wonderful with bean and cheese dishes, while smoky fajitas benefit from a meritage blend (a red in the Bordeaux style) or a medium-bodied Pinot Noir.

Thai – A local Gewürztraminer is a good, off-dry choice for this complex, spicy cuisine.

Spring/Early Summer Picnics – Nothing beats a dry Rosé, such as Tavel (France), with cold chicken and potato salad.

Pizza – Try a Long Island Merlot with a traditional red sauce pie, and a white such as Pinot Grigio with a no-sauce white pie.

Backyard Barbecue – Burgers and red Zinfandel are a match made in barbecue heaven, while grilled chicken benefits from just about any wine, but especially from a lightly chilled Beaujolais-style red.

Successfully pairing food and wine while entertaining, even in non-traditional cuisines, is not a perfect science. If you serve lighter wines with lighter foods, whites before reds if you are serving multiple courses, and match your food and wine in body and acidity, you can't fail. Oh, and always have beer on hand for those who prefer it over wine. Remember, it's just a dinner party, not a revolution. Cheers.

Let The Experts Help You Choose The Right Summer Camp

Sleep-away camp options generally fall into two categories: traditional or specialty camps. But, parents' initial visions of sleep-away camp generally fall into two categories as well: Bill Murray or Jason Voorhees. Traditional camps run the gamut from the typical Meatballs-style cabin camps to elaborate set-ups like Buck's Rock in Connecticut (still something of a maverick among summer camps even with its 58-year history), which offers everything from horseback riding to glassblowing. Buck's Rock, billed as a performing and creative arts camp, straddles the gap between traditional camps and specialty camps by nature of its diversity. Specialty camps (think of the craze for Spacecamp in the 80s) like those that specialize in single sports or activities, academic, performing arts, and travel camps, appeal to campers who have a goal in mind.

A typical day at either type of camp will vary depending on the style and flexibility of the camp. Again, there is a wide variety to be aware of. Program options range from "Structured," where days are scheduled in detail, to "Full Choice," where campers are allowed to select all of their activities. There is also just about every possible combination of these two options.

To help make sense of all the options parents can turn to a free advisory service based in New York, called Camp Experts and Teen Summers, that assists parents in finding the right fit for their children from among hundreds of options around the world. Joanne Paltrowitz of Camp Experts, has twenty years of experience connecting kids with camps. She says, "We have done the research for parents." She and her staff can help parents find the right fit for a first camp experience, help place special needs children, or open up the vast array of experiences available to children and teens during the summer. In addition to sleep-away camps, they can find the best travel, sailing, language, internship, law or other summer program.

The generally accepted starting age for sleep-away camp is eight years old, but, of course, you will know your child best. With younger children, it is often helpful if they have spent time away from home, such as a weekend at a friend's house. No matter how badly you want your children to stay with you and not leave for the summer, do not attempt repeated showings of Friday the Thirteenth movies to frighten them. If your children show interest in sleep-away camp, be positive and talk with them about the benefits. Camp can be an empowering growth experience for your child.

You'll want to start looking early – as much as a year and a half before your child will attend is recommended by Paltrowitz. Camp Experts can arrange visits to camps in session, have visited and evaluated the camps themselves, and is a good place to turn even if you get off to a late start. "We are all parents ourselves," says Paltrowitz, "and safety is our first concern." The main advantage of starting your search early is that it affords you the opportunity to see the camp in session, instead comparing different brochures and videos. This is an important, and seemingly obvious, fact many parents miss. Being at the camp while it is full of campers allows parents to gauge the spirit of camaraderie and level of adult involvement and supervision at the camp. There are intangible benefits to walking the grounds of the camp that just can't be gotten through comparisons of enrollment statistics and photos of the bunks.

Of the several factors you should be most aware of, such as distance from home, importance may vary depending on the level of parental neurosis. Summer camps generally operate either as co-ed camps, or as brother-sister camps, with girls and boys technically attending different camps that are next to each other. Camp sessions can last anywhere from one to seven weeks. The length of stay is something to consider based on the disposition of the camper (or parents) and preparedness for time away from home (again of both parents and camper). Very often it is the parents who cry when their child leaves for sleep-away camp, and the children who cry when they have to come back. Be prepared. The thing to remember is your children don't hate you; they just had so much fun they don't want to come home, because you did a good job choosing a camp with them. You are a good parent.

CLASSIC CARS WITH BOB GELBER

Save the whales. With gas prices approaching two dollars a gallon for regular, why would anyone with any sense drive a vehicle that gets under fifteen miles per gallon? Are the whales of the highway, aka sport utility vehicles, in danger of extinction?

As anyone who has followed my column knows, there's no love lost between me and SUVs. However, in America, where bigger always seems to be better, everyone has the right to own the car or truck of his dreams.

There are ways to get better fuel economy from heavy vehicles. The key word here is heavy, because the heavier an object is, the more horsepower it takes to move it. Due to their sheer size, and in most cases, four-wheel drive mechanical extras, all SUVs are heavier than plain-Jane automobiles.

The obvious first step for better miles-per-gallon is to lighten the load. But the cost of lighter materials, like aluminum, is prohibitive. How about a smaller engine? The downside to a smaller engine is that the SUV would be painfully sluggish. In my experience, small engines in big, heavy vehicles have to work so hard to propel the vehicle that they really don't get as good gas mileage as a larger engine. The best example I can give of this is the old air-cooled Volkswagen bus. I had a 1971 Volkswagen Westphalia Camper bus in the 70s. It was a great family vehicle, and about fifty times bigger and more comfortable than my Porsche. However, it was woefully underpowered since it had the same 46 horsepower engine as the humble and lighter Volkswagen Beetle. It used about the same miles per gallon as a small V-8 engine in an American-made van.

The biggest and heaviest vehicles on the road are the forty-foot tractor-trailers compressing the asphalt on our highways. Fully loaded, these behemoths can weigh up to one hundred thousand pounds. They all use diesel engines with motors so large that in some cases, with transmissions, the motor alone can weigh more than your SUV. The really big rigs, with a full load, can get six to eight miles per gallon, which is incredible gas mileage when you consider the weight they are lugging. Another upside to their diesel powerplants is that when new, some of them have factory warranties to one million miles.

1971 Volkswagen Westphalia Camper bus

Diesels were never very popular in American cars. The main reason is that they vibrate and emit noxious exhaust from their tailpipes. Pound for pound, they also don't produce as much horsepower as gasoline engines. Also, when gas was cheap, who needed a diesel? Times have changed; diesels are now quiet running and cleaner smelling... the diesel could save the SUV.

I've always thought it strange that Ford, General Motors, Chrysler and even Range Rover offer some great diesel engine options in their trucks and SUVs in Europe but none in their US models. I guess their marketing guys think that there is no demand for diesels from the average auto consumer here in America.

I have a sailboat with a small diesel engine for auxiliary power. It only has 23 horsepower, but moves the boat along smartly. Amazingly, at 3,000 RPM it only burns one half gallon of fuel per hour. It also has a life span of 10,000 hours. The average car engine has a life span of 2,000 hours. A well-designed diesel engine, properly maintained, in most cases will outlive the vehicle it powers.

Another way to save the whales is with the new gas-electric hybrid systems. Toyota's new and brilliant four door Prius is proof that these systems can be made to work inexpensively and efficiently. Look for them soon in American cars and trucks within the next two years.

Gas-electric power is nothing new. The legendary automotive engineer, Dr. Ferdinand Porsche, had hybrid power in German army vehicles during the First World War. In our own backyard, those Long Island Rail Road trains have been running on hybrid power for over fifty years. It's called diesel-electric.

With all the buzz about diesels and hybrid power, I still love the gasoline engine. Save the "wail" – the wail of a Ferrari, a Porsche flat 6, or a Honda multi-cam at 9,000 RPM. For that matter a stroked small block Chevy V-8 or a Chrysler V-10 is also worth saving.

Why is gas suddenly so expensive? Because the Chinese have suddenly discovered the joys of driving? I smell a rat here, but I'm just a car guy. Maybe a bulldog like James Carville should get on the case.

Away At School... By David Lion Rattiner

Twelve Dollar Coffee

On Sunday my girlfriend and I decided that we would go for a walk. It was a random idea (I couldn't think of anything better) and it was also kind of nice outside, so I figured if nothing else, we'd get some fresh air.

Walking felt good. It felt good to walk and talk, and it also felt good that walking does not cost any money. Also, if you play your cards right and talk about the right stuff, it can be romantic. In fact, I am going to say that walking is quite possibly the most ideal date, way better than eating at a restaurant or going to a movie. The way I see it, the recipe for a date is an activity with someone that you are interested in. Most of the time, these activities cost money, and for some God forsaken reason, my mom taught me when I was twelve years old that a gentleman should always pay.

But we were walking, that was the activity, and walking is free. I am a genius.

I think that one of the key elements of a walking date is to avoid stores that have things in them that you can afford. For example, walking into The Gap is a bad idea because there are tons of things under fifty dollars that I can afford but do not really want to spend money on. However, if we walk into really expensive stores, it is absolutely out of the question to purchase something. You can just sort of dream about it, saying to each other, "One day when I am rich and famous I'll get you that six thousand dollar hand bag, sweetheart."

After about an hour of strolling around Boston, walking into expensive stores (wink) and talking about topics such as what kinds of dogs we like, what our grandparents are like, and how weird it is that thirty years ago we didn't even have the Internet but we sent a guy to the moon, we decided that we needed to take a pit stop.

"The nicest bathroom in Boston is over there at the Copley Fairmont Hotel," I said.

"How do you know that?"

"I watched a "Seinfeld" where George knew the best places to go to a public bathroom no matter where he was located in New York City, so I decided that I would do the same thing in Boston."

"And the Fairmont Hotel is the best one, huh?"

"Oh, yeah. Wonderful facilities, excellent paper quality and a flush like a jet engine," I quoted.

"You are so weird."

We walked inside the Fairmont at Copley. It was obvious that everyone was assuming we were already guests of the hotel because the doorman tipped his hat to us. I strolled around like I was the prince of a small country, went to the bathroom and then rendezvoused at the front desk.

There is a fancy restaurant in the hotel called the Oak Room. It was open and the place was empty, since it was around eleven o'clock in the morning. I thought it would be a good idea to get a cup of coffee there. It is really beautiful. There is a piano, everything is wood, and my guess is, everything is made out of oak.

We sat ourselves and instantly a waiter came over.

"Just two cups of coffee, please."

We sat in the corner on a giant couch, in what is possibly Boston's most expensive restaurant, wearing sweatshirts, jeans and sneakers, ordering two cups of coffee. Some Frank Sinatra was playing, the waiters were acting busy in their white jackets and black ties, and the place had this great open space feeling.

The waiter came back with the coffee, along with the bill.

"Uh oh." I said.

"What's wrong?"

"The bill, I think that you have to be a guest of the hotel to eat here."

"Why?"

"Because it says here that I need to write down my room number and name."

"Do not say that we have a room here, David. We'll get in trouble."

"What do we do then? I don't think they let people in here that aren't guests of the hotel."

I was in a panic. I didn't have the courage to charge somebody else's room, but I really thought that I was going to get kicked out if I didn't. I was imagining my near future; getting yelled at by the management, working off the coffee washing dishes. The Boston police coming down to arrest me. I considered putting a night at the hotel on my credit card.

"I really don't think I can pay it the regular way, sweetheart."

"Well, just leave it there for a while. I'm enjoying myself. Then we'll just tell the truth and get kicked out."

Ten minutes went by, twenty minutes went by, an hour went by. We were still king and queen, but our time was almost up. Sooner or later, they would find out we were frauds. I was in a panic. The waiter came over. "I'm trying to close out, is this all set?"

I was almost in tears.

"I have a confession. We aren't guests and I don't feel right charging a room. Is there any way I can pay you in cash?"

"Of course you can. That is what most people do."

When In Manhattan...

Old Museum Is Still Fresh

The American Museum of Natural History is one of the coolest places in the city. It may not be considered hip, but it is definitely cool. Much has remained the same over the years, but new things are constantly added. No one who went as a kid could forget the indelible images of the giant blue whale hanging precariously above the Milstein Hall of Ocean Life or the towering bones of the T-Rex in the Hall of Saurischian Dinosaurs. AMNH continues to thrill in an age where frozen dioramas of man and animal might seem passe. Even the most tech-savvy people can appreciate the work put into the accuracy of each exhibit, whether of Indians, fish, or the myriad North American mammals posed in their habitats behind glass. It's worth spending a few extra moments to discover the lower species lurking among the larger creatures or the tools and crafts possessed by the mannequins of the men and women that made them.

Another great section of the museum, the Hayden Planetarium and Rose Center for Earth and Space, creates a nice diversion from the Earth-based exhibits. The Rose Center was opened in February 2000 and represents one of the most ambitious achievements in the Museum's history. The 120-foot-high, 333,500-square-foot facility expanded the AMNH's square footage by approximately 25 percent. Setting a new standard for museums, and more specifically, planetaria, it is a center for scientific research, a technological achievement, an architectural icon, and a powerful educational resource. The planetarium has been rebuilt, and the exhibitions explore the rich history and depths of the cosmos. The ambitious design includes the largest glass curtain wall in the United States, and an interior space with a ceiling higher than that of Grand Central Station. The facility was created with an eye toward informing and inspiring visitors with hands-on, interactive exhibits that illuminate the universe and discoveries of modern astrophysics. The planetarium itself is one of the most technologically advanced in the world and a worthy competitor to any show in the city. Even if one writer might regret blowing off one of the last Nirvana shows in the United States to see the U2 laser show there, it's great.

For the ladies, whether you are one or you want to take one, the Butterfly Conservatory will be open until May 31st. The Conservatory is one of the few exhibits in AMNH that features living animals. Visitors will enter the sealed room and mingle with a variety of species of butterfly. If she, or you, is more interested in all that glitters, check out the Halls of Minerals and Gems. The Hall of Gems has stones of extraordinary size, color, and shape. Among these specimens is the 563-carat Star of India, the largest and most famous star sapphire in the world, formed almost 2 billion years ago and donated to the Museum by J. P. Morgan in 1900. Also featured in the Hall of Gems is the Patricia Emerald, a 632-carat specimen that is one of the very few large, gem-quality emeralds that have been preserved uncut. Tiffany and Co. has nothing close, and you don't have to worry about requests or desires for purchase here. There are about 114,000 specimens in the Museum's collection: 90,000 minerals, 20,000 rocks, and 4,000 gems. The room literally vibrates with energy, and may prove what crystal enthusiasts have been saying about stone power for centuries.

The American Museum of Natural History is loaded with exciting things, and it is always changing and updating. Drop by to see the above, as well as discovering what other treats are in store for you. The IMAX theater and the current exhibit on the lost city of Petra are two great options. AMNH is located on 79th Street and Central Park West, and is open daily from 10a.m. to 5:45p.m. The Rose Center is open until 8:45p.m. on Fridays. Call (212) 769-5100, or visit www.amnh.org for more information.

Dan's Papers SPRING GARDENING

The Garden At Rock Cottage by Lance Brilliantine

Slugging Away At Slugs

Each year, East End gardeners slug it out with an insidious enemy, the garden slug. Unless resisted, slugs can have a disastrous effect on gardens (dry, sandy beach gardens are less likely to be invaded). As the weather warms this month and into early April, the telltale signs of these slimy pests begin to appear.

While having a few slugs can be beneficial to gardens because they eat decaying materials and produce humus, slugs, also called lawn prawns, can eat an entire crop of newly-planted seedlings and make the leaves of emerging perennials and hostas look like Swiss cheese. Nothing is more disappointing.

One reason slugs are prolific is that they are hermaphroditic and can mate with themselves. Slugs can produce up to three dozen eggs several times yearly. The jelly-like, bb-sized eggs hatch in about two weeks. The voracious offspring mature into adults in about eight weeks. Slugs can live for several years, and grow larger and hungrier as time passes.

While it is hard to win the battle against slugs, garden success depends on applying multiple strategies to control the pests. A number of natural slug enemies help control them. These naturally occurring enemies include frogs and toads, centipedes, black ground beetles, and a number of birds.

Probably the best plan of attack begins by assuring the garden is clean and has few places where slugs can hide, sleep, and reproduce. The removal of matter and weeds from flowerbeds eliminates hiding places. Regular soil cultivation ensures dirt clumps are small and also prevents hiding places. Consistently turning over garden rocks permits the destruction of eggs and eliminates generations of slugs. Sprinkling cedar bark chips or crushed eggshells around plants provides a slug irritant that cuts, dehydrates, and kills them. Oat bran is toxic to slugs when they eat it and will reduce populations.

Preparing a household arsenal is preferable to using store-bought chemicals that have the potential to harm birds and the environment. Bury empty tuna or cat food cans around the garden to a half-inch above surrounding soil. Fill the cans half full with cheap beer. Slugs find the beer captivating, become drunk and disoriented when they sip it, and drown in the cans.

You can also make bait traps from empty plastic bottles. Cut the plastic bottles in half. Place a pile of slightly dampened, dry dog food inside the bottom part of the bottle, and push the inverted top part of the bottle into the bottom part to create a "no escape" entryway. Slugs will be attracted to the bait, will not be able to escape, and will die in the next day's sun.

There are more drastic battle strategies that can be applied. These involve creating plant barriers. You can create barriers using salt trenches with plastic-wrapped cardboard set into the ground, or by staking black plastic around the garden periphery. Salt barriers destroy slugs as they cross. Black plastic becomes so hot on sunny days it causes slugs to dehydrate, stick to the plastic, and die. You can also spread fireplace ashes around the garden, which sticks to the slugs and causes them to die.

As part of the battle strategy, be careful about using nitrogen-rich fertilizers. This seems to make plants more susceptible to attack. Be cautious, therefore, about using fresh manure or artificial fertilizers that are rich in nitrogen. It is better to use slow-release plant foods, or to use well-composted manure.

In mid March, we are already getting the artillery prepped to slug it out with the slugs. With some diligence and a little luck, the slugs will head for the hills and our hostas and other perennials will be victorious!

SPRING GARDENING

Living With Flowers

The urge to create a garden usually begins with a desire to change the overall landscape of the property. My clients often want enclosures for privacy, sites for swimming pools, tennis courts, golf courses, patios, gazebos, ponds, paths, or other structures decorated with plants that look good and grow well together.

The use of beds and borders, a container garden, an herb flowering garden, or a wildflower, vegetable, or stonewall garden can help to give colors, shapes, texture and scents to any landscape structure. In these gardens, I maximize the use of flowering trees, shrubs, perennials, annuals, herbs, vines and ground covers. Flowers are the major attraction of a garden. They attract our eyes to admire their beauty. They attract visitors such as birds, butterflies, ladybugs, dragonflies and.... house guests! Flowers are the charm, the lure, and the light of landscaping. I remember a commercial that said, "Make yourself happy, give yourself flowers." And I tell you, "Make yourself happy and plant as many flowers as you can in your garden!"

In the projects that I design and execute at my company, Unlimited Earth Care, I break up hedges and hard structures with flowering gardens to create vistas. These designs give the feeling of spaciousness and connect different parts of the yard by adding depth.

Perennial borders create masses of stunning color from spring through fall. They can be designed featuring several colors or a color theme. The plants are arranged in groups of the same variety, color and height.

Since the flowers bloom in large clusters, they create masses of colors that are dramatic even from a distance. Repeating colors along the length of the border creates a unified picture. A variety of perennials that bloom in different seasons should be planted to fill the border with color from spring to fall.

A flowering herb garden is the perfect solution to landscaping sunny sites such as stone patios, swimming pool borders, and decks. Herbs are among the most enjoyable plants you can grow. Their flowers and leaves scent the air with pungent fragrances all season long. Most herbs require full sun and well-drained, slightly acidic soil. My favorite flowering herb is Lavender Provence. It has a grassy look, bluish gray coloring with a delicate light purple flower that has a very long blooming period. This flower can also make a great accent edging shrub or perennial bed border.

Planting a meadow of wildflowers is a way to spread color in your garden. Striking and unusual, wildflowers offer an exciting addition to a full-sun garden, and are generally easy-care and trouble-free plants. An effective way to use wildflowers is to include them with a mix of cultivated garden plants. Wildflower meadows look best when connected with woods and ponds, thus offering an excellent visual flow.

Ornamental grasses, with their long season of good looks and an exceptional range of colors, shapes and textures, can be superb border accents. They can be placed to balance or center shrubs or perennial borders. This can be achieved by using different varieties in different heights and by combining them with perennials such as sedum "Autumn Joy", Perovskia, Lythrum or annuals such as Verbena Bonariensis. Ornamental grasses also help to distract from the rigid shape of some trees, shrubs and hedges, giving an unexpected flow and movement to the entire landscape. Also, ornamental

It's a struggle that could bring any gardener to his/her knees.

A question posed frequently by the deer-dogged is: how does one deter these hooved marauders from turning a garden into a salad bar? Everyone seems to have a favorite remedy, a particular something that, no matter how outlandish, seems to work.

I've heard that way back in the "grow-your-own" days in Montauk, a certain someone had a friend who worked at a zoo. This friend provided lion dung, which as the story goes, not only kept the deer at bay for acres around, it even fertilized the plantings. Rumor has it, it was a bumper crop.

But, back to the issue in question. What's the most foolproof method to keep these roving plant eaters away? Hands down, it's a barrier. A tall barrier, since deer can jump 12 feet from a standing position. For the resolute, adding electric wires (a special touch) and slanting the fence outwards will increase the odds of keeping your garden to yourself.

For those who think "that kind of fence" (picture eight feet tall posts swathed in chicken wire) is an eyesore, there are other things to try. So, if a fence is not on the list... entertain the following:

Scare Tactics Deer are notoriously skittish. Forget about stuffing hair into pantyhose, instead try tying black fishing line or black deer netting around the perimeter of your garden. It's a trick that oftentimes fools deer, especially at night. Also, you could keep a radio on at night, but keep in mind, Bambi and company won't stay frightened forever. It's important to mix it up.

Coyote urine is said to work, as would any predator "juice." To use, place the foam "darts" that come with the bottled urine 10 to 12 feet apart and spritz the liquid on the absorbent foam. You'll have to "freshen" up the scent regularly, especially after rain. There are several companies on the Internet that sell predator urine.

Smart Planting One of the most effective means of managing a deer problem is to use plants they dislike. While it may seem like deer will eat anything in their path, this simply isn't true. Deer have strong likes and dislikes. They also seem to know which plants are poisonous to them.

This can be difficult because deer vary from neighborhood to neighborhood on what they will or won't eat. And many of the plants deer enjoy devouring have become some of the most popular and common landscape plants like impatiens, roses, daylilies, and tulips.

Woody ornamentals rarely damaged by deer include American holly, common boxwood and Colorado blue spruce. Herbs and flowering plants like dusty miller, blue salvia, dahlia, forget-me-not, baby's breath, primrose, goldenrod, purple cornflower, garlic chives, verbena, wax begonia, bleeding heart, spearmint (and most members of the mint family) Shasta daisy, sweet William, lavender, lily-of-the-valley, columbine, clematis, heather, snapdragon, sweet alyssum, rosemary, sage, sweet woodruff and yucca are a few that have proven deer resistant.

If you are willing to live dangerously...woody ornamentals such as American bittersweet, common lilac, and forsythia, along with the sunflower, pansy, coneflower (Echinacea), peony, iris, English ivy and cranesbill geranium only occasionally fall prey to deer.

Nasty Nibbles Okay, you've planted your garden, carefully choosing items to keep these voracious visitors at bay. Now it's time to spice things up a bit. There are several commercial sprays available on the market, the most effective of which are made from putrefied eggs. Make sure to read the labels if you are using any of these products on plants you will be eating.

You can also make your own spray with 2 tablespoons of hot pepper sauce or crushed red pepper mixed with 1 tablespoon of liquid dish soap and 1 gallon of water. Spray weekly or after it rains and hope your deer aren't into spicy foods. Another home-brew: whip 3 eggs with 2 tablespoons of cayenne pepper; mix with a gallon of water and spray. Deer, being herbivores, will turn their little black noses up at eggs.

SPRING GARDENING

Pansy-Monium

You know spring is here when you see flats of pansies, with their brightly colored and cheerful blooms, bidding Old Man Winter sweet adieu. Say the word pansy, however, and what comes to mind? Timid. Weepy. Weak. Yet, these flowers are anything but.

Tracing their popularity to the Victorian Era, pansy plants were used in intricate bedding schemes that were all the rage at the time. Today, they've become a favorite among experts and gardeners due, in part, to new developments (modern versions) and renewed curiosity in heirloom varieties. Food enthusiasts have placed pansy blooms atop cakes, as well as mingling them among salad greens.

Pansies, like their cousin the viola, are members of the violet family. The common blue and yellow viola (Johnny jump-up) is the species most violas can trace in their lineage. Pansies are actually bred from violas but have been cultivated for thousands of years, so it's hard to define their exact origin.

Among the most unusual pansies growing today are those with "faces," an heirloom variety with ruffled petals that looks like a parrot tulip. New colors such as the black and orange pansy abound and the range of colors includes red, purple, blue, bronze, pink, yellow, white, lavender, apricot and mahogany.

Pansies are divided into pure color flowers or multicolored flowers. Pure color varieties, called "clear flowers," have a single color on the flower. These lack the familiar faces that most people associate with the blossoms.

Multicolored flowers, called "blotched" or "faced," often have dark blue or black centers. There are some varieties that have a different color blotch from the usual dark blue or black. Other multicolored pansies have white or light colored edges or have petals of differing colors.

There are three categories of pansies, and they are based on flower size: large, with 3 1/2-4 1/2-inch diameter blooms; medium, with 2 1/2-3 1/2-inch diameter blooms; and multiflora, with 1 1/2-2 1/2-inch diameter blooms. More than 300 pansy varieties are available and most come in a series. Each series has similar plant qualities, like plant size and heat tolerance. Within a series, different flower colors and color patterns exist.

Though pansies and violas are perennials, they are often treated as annuals or biennials depending on the climate they are grown in. On the East End, with our warm to hot summers and freezing winters, pansies thrive in the cool weather of spring, but become sun scorched and die back in the heat of mid-summer. If they are planted in late summer to fall, they will thrive during the time of cool weather and die back once conditions shift to freezing. Few gardeners take advantage of this season to grow them, seeing pansies as only spring flowers.

Ideally, pansies should be planted where they'll get lots of sun in the winter after the trees lose their leaves, but then enjoy some shade when those trees leaf out again in spring. To get started, mix compost into their soil, plant them, water well and then just stand back and enjoy. Depending on when you plant them, they will produce new blossoms until it gets very cold or pretty warm. Around the time summer heat finally blasts them out – generally at the end of June or early July – is the ideal time to start seeds inside if you want to continue the growing season for fall.

As mentioned earlier, pansy flowers aren't just pretty to look at – the flowers of all pansies are edible. And those tasty flowers contain a healthy bonus. Dr. Jim Duke, author of the bestseller Green Pharmacy, has found pansies to be one of the best possible plant sources for rutin, a nutrient that just may be the best herbal treatment for spider veins, varicose veins and other capillary problems! The amount necessary to strengthen capillaries is about six or so big pansy flowers a day.

For me, March not only heralds the end of winter but also signals the arrival of beautiful, colorful and whimsical pansies. This spring, start the gardening season off with a bang. Select a few flats of pansies to plant. You won't be disappointed.

Pots, urns and window boxes offer easy and fun ways to add color and provide flexibility to experiment with new plants, colors and textures that can complement the landscape. Different combinations can be used in the containers such as shrubs or topiaries with flowers and vines, perennial and annual flowers; herbs and vegetables to bring accent to decks, patios and terraces.

There are numerous ways to utilize flowers to achieve a better and more attractive landscape design. But most important for Unlimited Earth Care is the character and spirit that we bring to the property. SPRING GARDENING

Clean Up Your Act For Spring

Signs of spring are here: tree buds are swelling, bulbs have surfaced, and the Equinox has passed. The sun's renewed warmth is already evident on some days. Gardeners are having that indefatigable instinct to get their hands dirty and complete gardening chores.

March, with its unpredictable weather, is a perfect time for garden cleanup in order to buy time later on for more enjoyable gardening activities. Here are suggestions on things to do during March when there are breaks in the weather.

Start by removing and discarding remaining leaves, plant debris, and dead annuals from last year. While some believe it is too early to remove this winter covering, removal actually helps the soil warm, promotes bulb photosynthesis, and eliminates potential diseases. (Removing dead leaves also removes a high percentage of deer tick larvae before they emerge.) Use a high-quality rake, gardener's claw, or your gloved hands to perform this task. Lawns also benefit from a good raking now to remove debris and thatch, and to lift turf. Pull out or trim away spent leaves from irises in order to ward off borers, bacterial rot, and leaf spot. Use gloved hands to remove debris around emerging bulbs to prevent the scarring and shredding of delicate, emerging leaves caused by rakes.

Now is the time to cut back ornamental grasses. Be sure to wear gloves as you trim grasses; dried grass blades are sharp. If the grasses are isolated and far away from inflammables, you can burn off the old foliage. If not, tie heavy string around the middle of the old foliage and cut stalks off below the string with a saw or heavy-duty shear. This approach pre-bundles the stalks for easy removal.

Once debris is gone, inspect it and flower beds, to be sure that plants uprooted by frost heave have not been dislodged or discarded. Any such plants need to be replanted. Surprisingly, many of these plants seem to benefit from replanting.

On days when the soil can be worked, use a pitchfork to turn over soil in flower beds. Be careful not to uproot perennials during the process. We also suggest covering newly turned soil with a thick coating of peat moss. Two weeks later, douse the area with what we call "Rock Cottage Tonic." To make the tonic, place ten cups of cow manure and two cups of liquid ammonia in a 5-gallon bucket. Fill the bucket with water. Cover the bucket and permit the mixture to simmer for two weeks. Use liberally around perennials, shrubs, and other plants to imbue renewed vigor as the season gets going.

Now is a good time to check roses to ensure they are still covered with mounds of soil or mulch. Roses do best if they remain covered until mid- to late-April when leaves appear, because they are susceptible to early Spring damage from frost. Perform final rose pruning now by removing dead stalks and trimming other stalks back to outward-facing buds. Be sure to prune stalks at a 45-degree angle to permit water runoff.

Fruit trees also benefit from early Spring maintenance. Prune out dead branches and water spouts, and cut back tree crowns to encourage air circulation. Prune away touching branches that foster bruises and disease. For trees that suffered any type of blight or fungus last season, spray them now with Bordeaux mixture, an alternate copper fungicide, or Daconil before buds emerge. This also works well on any ornamentals that had leaf spot or mildew damage the previous season.

Because weeds get started early, March is an excellent time to inspect flower beds for signs of last year's monster weeds. If you spot weeds, now is a great time to pull out roots with ease. You can also use a hoe to remove many weeds seeking a foothold.

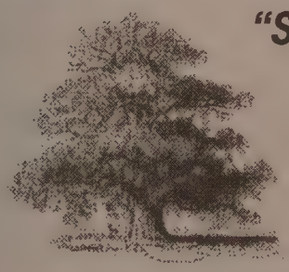

We do not mind doing these garden chores during March. Undertaking these chores gives us the opportunity to commingle with nature and feel a sense of accomplishment, all without the pressure to "get it done."

The Comeback Kids

Now that spring is officially here, you may be thinking about doing some spring cleaning. You know you're itching to sort through things you've had stashed in the back of your closets in order to make space for what's new and cool. After all, you're a fashionista, a beauty connoisseur, who's always ahead of the curve, on the cutting edge, ready and willing to leave old trends behind – way behind. Yes? Well, you can stop right there, people. I'm here to tell you that plenty of what came before 2004 is back with a vengeance, and you better believe it. This year, what's old is new again and it can be seen in music, fashion, health and beauty and even attitude. So if you're one of those people who hoards things and can't bear the thought of throwing anything away – the face cream you've been using for twenty years and wouldn't dream of changing – you might just be hipper and more au courant than you thought you were.

"Sex Doesn't Sell: Miss Prim Is In" was the headline of a New York Times style section in February of this year. The feature, covering fashion week, talked about the fact that designers today are leaning toward a retro look that harks back not to the 70s or 80s, but as far back as the 50s and early 60s. Girls, these days, are looking to role models like Mandy Moore, who stands out because she doesn't show it all, rather than the more revealing media icons who do. In fact, the New York Times quotes trend forecaster David Wolfe who said that, "In fashion these days, to be uptight, is to be edgy." Twin sets are back, as are polo shirts, pencil skirts, up do's and even, dare I say it, health-conscious Dr. Scholl sandals. And don't even think about coming home after a day at the beach without moisturizing with an old favorite like Oil of Olay. Wind back the clock, because this year is the year of the comeback kids. Here are two or three you might have forgotten about to get you started.

Lacoste: The unisex sports T that made its resurgence as a fashion statement at the end of last year's summer and is even more en vogue this year. It's been seen on runways and celebs alike and you're next. So rummage to the very back of your closet and see if you can find the one you bought twenty years ago – Couple it with a pair of jeans, or a flirty little skirt and you're hot to trot. What, can't get your hands on the now coveted item because you foolishly threw it away? Or are you too young to have had it and can't beg, borrow or steal from mother, grandmother or older friend? Well, it's a must this season, so buy Lacoste in new and improved colors and get up to date. Beware though, the style is old, but the price is "all new 2004." Collared lacoste T-shirts now sell from $70-$80.

Dr. Scholls: Remember them? I do, and used to cringe at the very thought that my Mum would try to get me in a pair because they were good for my feet and posture. The healthy shoe! Whatever. They even have the prefix Dr. in their name, but I just hated them, they were so...frumpy, prim and proper and so...not for me! Geeks wore them, didn't they? That was until last month in Miami when I snapped up a pair of these fashion relics, substituting them for my high heels, I proudly wore them, knowing that I was ahead of the style curve. I not only looked cool, but my feet are as healthy and happy about the sandals as I am.

Oil of Olay: If you're always looking for the newest innovation in moisture and wrinkle control, you might want to take a pause and look back at Oil of Olay, which actually never really went that far away. But it's interesting to note that sales of this age-old elixir are better than ever. So lather some on after the beach, or before going in to the elements and enjoy the tried and tested skin enricher, a golden oldie that still loves the skin you're in.

Time to Yoga-matize Yourself!

Yoga has been getting more and more popular in recent years, and anyone who has done a yoga practice understands why. Whenever I rave about yoga to people who have yet to do it, they seem either hesitant to try or skeptical that it actually works. I can sympathize with all of those skeptics and inflexible people who simply can't envision themselves touching their own toes. I grew up absolutely dreading the "sit and reach" in gym class. My excuse was that "my legs were too long." Granted, I was short-changed on the torso, but my arms were just as lanky as my legs. Still, when my gym teacher would push on the top of my back, shocked at my inability to bend, my face would go red with embarrassment. I couldn't imagine myself bending into some of the Cirque du Soleil-like positions that I saw in the yoga magazines I found strewn about the dentist's office.

Upward facing dog

Downward facing dog

Due to yoga and only yoga (you will never catch me running), I can now lay my hands palm down on the floor when I reach down to touch my toes. So, skeptics and hesitators, I urge you to try. No matter what your age or body type, yoga will make you look and feel healthier. As far as I'm concerned, it is the best thing you can do for your body.

I understand why yoga instructors are some of the happiest people I've met. The practice blends the physical, the spiritual, and the philosophical in a way that allows you to let go of stress and embrace the full presence of the moment. It's not just an exercise. It is meant to be a whole philosophy. According to Yoga Journal, in an article by yoga instructor and studio owner Cyndi Lee, there are eight limbs of yoga. They are:

yamas – restraints niyamas – observances
asana – postures
pranayama – breathing
pratyahara – withdrawal of senses
dharana – concentration dhyani – meditation
samadhi – absorption

The asana limb is the phase of yoga that most people practice, and includes physical postures that purify the body and prepare for meditation and stillness.

Yoga is a 2000 year old practice that originated in India. The first known yoga literature is from that time, written by Patanjali, and it is called the Yoga Sutra.

Hatha yoga is a series of asanas that is designed to help with the alignment of your skin, muscles, and bones. This is how yoga helps with posture. The root of the word hatha comes from sanskrit, as do all yoga terms. "Ha" means sun, and represents the masculine, the active, and the hot. "Tha" means moon, and it represents the feminine, the receptive, and the cool. The practice of hatha yoga is designed to achieve the balance of opposites both in the physical, through strength and flexibility, and the spiritual, through effort and surrender.

Yoga is something you can incorporate into your daily routine for a healthier lifestyle. Even when I don't have the time to take a class, I like to do a short practice on my own. One easy routine that offers a great workout, which you can do as many or as few times as you feel comfortable with, is the sun salutation. Here's how.

1. Start with your hands together in prayer pose and your feet shoulder width apart.
2. Inhale, arms sweep up to the sky.
3. Exhale, swandive your arms down, hands on the floor (or as far as you can reach while keeping your shoulder blades back).
4. Inhale, make sure your spine is straight.
5. Exhale, step your left foot back into lunge pose. Both hands on the ground on either side of your right foot. Inhale.
6. Exhale, step your right foot back into plank pose. (Like you're ready for a push-up: arms and legs straight, palms and balls of the feet on the ground) Inhale.
7. Exhale, lower your body to the floor, chest first. Try not to bend the elbows outwards, but keep them next to the body.
8. Inhale to "Upward facing dog": The tops of your feet and the palms of your hands are on the ground. Eyes up to the sky. (See picture))
9. Exhale to "Downward facing dog": Roll your toes so you are now on the bottoms of your feet, palms still on the ground. Try to keep your arms and legs straight and your rear end lifted. Eyes facing your feet. I usually hold this pose for five breaths. (See picture)
10. Look forward at your hands, inhale and step your left foot forward into lunge.
11. Exhale, step your right foot forward, let your body hang over long legs.
12. Inhale arms up to the sky, standing straight.
13. Exhale hands together in prayer pose.

That is one sun salutation! You can move quickly through the asanas, moving with your breath, or you can hold each pose for several breaths. When I don't have time to take an organized class, I do five sun salutations when I wake up in the morning. It feels great! Namaste (the divine in me bows to the divine in you).

Police Blotter

Every year, East Hampton Town and Montauk Police officers have their hands full while maintaining order at the St. Patty's Day parade in Montauk. And every year local police blotters report dozens of crimes and tales of drunken parade-goers. Well, in case you couldn't guess, this year wasn't much different. After being told by police to stop several times, a 19-year-old Westhampton man continued to fight with another man. According to police the fight, which attracted a crowd of 50 or so other youths, culminated when the Westhampton man shoved a police officer. He was cuffed and brought to the station before being charged with disorderly conduct, refusing lawful order and second degree harassment. Police also issued several tickets and warnings to individuals found drinking in public. All in all Town Police kept the rowdiest parade in the state a safe one.

A 41-year-old East Hampton man was arrested last week for issuing a bad check. An officer contacted the man on behalf of the complainant who had received the rubber check last week. The East Hampton man agreed to come down to the station where he was arrested and held on $250 bail.

* * *

There's nothing wrong with taking a stroll down a country lane in the Hamptons on a crisp cool evening, right? Well, what if you're drugged up on prescription meds and meandering down the center line? Police seem to think this is a bad thing. An East Hampton resident called police on Wednesday after seeing a man wandering down Steven Hands Path in the middle of the road. Upon arrival an officer found the same and attempted questioning the man. According to police, the 38-year-old man couldn't produce any identification at the time, but did produce a bag full of pills which he couldn't prove were prescribed to him. The man was placed under arrest for criminal possession of a controlled substance.

A thief in Northwest Woods saw his window of opportunity and took it. No, really, he actually took it. A contractor called police on Friday after arriving to a job site to find one of his $6,500 custom windows missing. Police are investigating.

* * *

Builders beware, another theft occurred at a different site in East Hampton last Monday. This time twenty-four bundles of cedar shingles were stolen. Hey, if you can't buy a roof over your head, steal one.

* * *

A cab driver had a scary run-in with a would-be robber on Monday in Flanders. The cabby told police that he was waiting for a fare when a man approached him with a kitchen knife and demanded his money. The cabby then ran from the car, at which time the robber fled behind an apartment building. Police arrived and searched the area including inside the apartment building. With a description from the victim, officers located the man in one of the rooms. The 21-year-old Riverhead man was arrested and charged with attempted robbery in the first degree.

A couple of other pill perps had run-ins with the cops this past week. In two separate incidents police were called to the same drug store in East Hampton. The first man brought a prescription to be filled, but when he was denied due to the lack of information filled out on the slip, he simply went outside and wrote it out himself. When he returned moments later, the pharmacist realized the man was doing something illegal and called the cops. Later in the week, police were called to the drug store in reference to another man who changed his prescription from 20 pills to 30 pills.

PRAISE

Dear Dan,

I just wanted to thank you for writing Spalding Gray's obituary. It was touching, insightful, and needed to be written.

You were right when you wrote he was brilliant. I think a lot of people never got a chance to enjoy his brilliance, and I hope they take your advice and rent Swimming to Cambodia although I think Gray's Anatomy would be a better way for new fans to get acclimated to him.

I would also like to offer my sympathies to his family.

REAL FRIEND

Dear Dan,

We started looking seriously for a vacation home in the Hamptons in June, 2003. We have looked on and off for about ten years, but were never serious before this. We felt the best way to go about it was to contact 2-3 agents in each area we were interested in. Our friends told us that agents were not to be trusted and to be suspicious.

We started looking in Westhampton/Quogue, Bridgehampton, Water Mill, Wainscott and the Noyac/North Haven/Sag Harbor areas. We didn't realize at first that most houses are co-brokered so that almost any agent in any area could show us any house listed anywhere. As one agent explained, "in real estate it is co-broker or go broke." Nonetheless over the months that we looked we encountered approximately ten different agents and learned quickly that not all agents are alike. Most of the agents that showed us houses didn't have a lot of information on the house except what was listed on the sheets. Maybe this was due to the fact that they were co-brokered. Most just wanted us to, as they say, "make an offer." However one agent in the crowd stands out. From the day that she started showing us houses to the day of the closing, she worked very, very hard to obtain any information we wanted, answered every question honestly and when she didn't have an answer told us and then worked to get us the answers. Given that we were spending what we considered to be a significant sum (maybe not by Hamptons standards, but by ours) we were nervous and apprehensive. She did her best to allay our fears and nervousness. We would call her day and night. We had her cell phone, home phone, and office phone and nothing stopped us from calling with endless questions, bothering her at breakfast, lunch, dinner, days off and even when she was on vacation. We bordered on abusive. We learned about her life and she learned about ours. The house we ended up buying is directly next door to her. Without her working as hard as she did, we never would have obtained the house of our dreams. We started out suspicious of her and the process and gained a friend and neighbor in the end. We hope that this letter thanks Kathy Zapolla of Stough Real Estate in Bridgehampton in some small way.

Thank You,
Linda Vilensky

DAN'S CLASSIFIED/REAL ESTATE FOR RENT

MUSIC

Songwriter seeks collaborator(s). After a 15 year hiatus during which I established a successful non-music business; former major label record producer & published/recorded songwriter seeks counterparts in Sag, EH, etc., on weekends to jointly write, arrange and record. I write both words and music (but again, the ideal collaborator also writes both), I sing, play guitar and keys. You in addition to being an accomplished writer & perhaps a good singer, are some combination of an accomplished musician, programmer and hard disk recording whiz. My goal is to find the great writing partner I never had 15 years ago and to produce some good work. Send an email link to a couple of your songs (gxw@aol.com), or send to Box 2691, Sag Harbor, NY 11963
